These cold winds proved a cold welcome for the "Queen for a Day," but when we wandered into the bower of flowers at Hayward's Flower and Gift shop and saw all the lovely potted plants which had just arrived, pepper plants, azalias, African violets, poinsettias, begonias and cyclamens, I forgot the chill outside.

Heading for the Boulder Builder's Supply, there on the counter was a complete assortment of the Revere Ware copper clad-stainless steel pans, double boilers and any kind of a cooking utensil you could name. Even a singing tea-kettle in this attractive ware.

So many women have been knitting Argyle socks at Carol's and asking where they could purchase the sock frame dryers. The Men's Store has these rust resistant frames, boxed and in sizes 10½ to 13.

No matter what size or color you want, the Mannequin dress shop has the housecoat you've wanted. Flowered rayon, wool, lace or plain trim, there it is on the rack, with either short or long sleeves.

The Visitor's Bureau has a bargain table and here you can name it. Also they are closing out below cost, their line of sterling silver bracelets, key chains, rings, charms and tie clasps. Then beside these bargains, they have Eastman and Ansco cameras, and with these you are given two rolls of film, free.

Roper's Radio Shop has something new. If you have the player, he has the Columbia Long Play records for it. This is sure a time saver.
