Took Torch to Turkey?

'Twas destined to be a jim-dandy of a turkey dinner!

For wasn't the Christmas turk of the Miles Royer family one of the biggest in town?

But alas! it proved too big, when time came to cook it, and it would not go into the oven at the Royer home, on Wyoming and D.

(That, at least, is the rumor that runs the rounds over at the Bureau of Mines. The News seeks confirmation or denial.)

Now a man with ump-teen years of research experience may be expected to have some yankee ingenuity. 'Tis said Royer went about the business of building a temporary brick oven, or sump'n, borrowed a blow torch and spent three hours carefully turning the turk in front of the torch. . . .
