

They Tend to Your 'Knittin', These Two Women in City's New Shop

Next time you walk by 554 Nevada Highway you ought to stop in, or look in on Thalia Boyle. You'll probably see her tending to her knittin', or teaching some Boulder City woman a thing or twelve about crocheting.

Yes, she's the local contribution to the firm of Carol's Handicraft store. The other half of the deal is Carol Granstrom, a Las Vegas woman of fashion who is saleslady at Ronzone's.

Mrs. Boyle and Mrs. Granstrom have the firm belief that they can give the fair sex of this city a service in handicraft and that is why their neat little shop should be a center of attention.

Both have interesting backgrounds. Mrs. Boyle, whose husband is George Boyle and is an expert on Titanium in the Bureau of Mines here, spent 17 years of her life in Honolulu. Her father was born there. High point of her life until now was on Dec. 7, 1941—Pearl Harbor day.

She was there! Yes, she was working with the navy and she was as busy as everyone else that day with bombs dropping around her and all 'ell breaking loose.
