

Strike Leaves 'Bake' No Longer in Class by Himself

Ever see the traveling agent of a railroad thumbing a ride by automobile?

B. M. Prescott, traveling agent of the Union Pacific railroad, did not exactly thumb a ride, but it was soon after the railroad strike started yesterday that he arranged for a ride from Las Vegas to Los Angeles via highway.

He got the ride with Harry Pollock, salesman for Haas Baruch of Iris food fame, from Las Vegas to Los Angeles.

W. E. "Bake" Baker is no longer in a class by himself. "Bake" is Boulder City manager for TWA. During the war, priorities kept the airlines so tight that he used to travel about the country via every other medium than his own airline.
