

An aerial photograph of the Colorado River winding through a deep, rugged canyon. The river is a vibrant blue-green color, contrasting with the reddish-brown and tan layered rock walls of the canyon. The canyon walls show distinct horizontal geological strata. The river flows from the upper right towards the lower left, with several bends and small islands. The lighting suggests a late afternoon or early morning, with long shadows and warm tones on the rock faces.

A Colorado River Reader

Edited by Richard F. Fleck