Table of Contents

UNIT I. WHAT CAUSED THE DEPRESSION?	1
CHAPTER 1 CONSERVATISM AND NORMALCY	3
Examines the policies of Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover and the conservative, laissez-faire thinking of the public and of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew Mellon which so profoundly influenced them.
CHAPTER 2 THE FARM PROBLEM	10
Poses issues as to causes of and proposed solutions to the farm problem of the 1920's, and focuses on the McNary-Haugen bill to provide government aid to farmers.
CHAPTER 3 PROSPERITY: FACT OR MYTH	17
Presents social science data on industry, finance, and labor, posing the issue of whether the prosperity of the 1920's was real or illusory.
CHAPTER 4 RISE AND CRASH	25
Describes and explains the workings of the stock market, and examines disputes over the effects of leverage, margin, and mass psychology on the rise and crash of the Great Bull Market.
CHAPTER 5 WHAT CAUSED THE DEPRESSION?	36
Presents materials on income, savings, and spending, and deals with the consumers' failure to buy what the country produced as a cause of the Depression, and unequal income distribution as a cause of lack of purchasing power.
UNIT II. PURCHASING POWER AND THE DEPRESSION	43
CHAPTER 6 PRESIDENT HOOVER AND THE DEPRESSION	45
Portrays the effects of the Depression and Hoover's attempts to end it by restoring confidence and shoring up business, and debates the traditional theory that prosperity would 'trickle down' to the unemployed.
CHAPTER 7 RELIEF FOR THE UNEMPLOYED	52
Should the federal government assume the responsibility of aiding local communities help their jobless residents? This chapter examines debates over the need for and dangers of such a program.
CHAPTER 8 HOOVER, ROOSEVELT AND THE BANKING PANIC	63
Examines the banking system and the causes of the panic, and Roosevelt's role as saviour and/or wrecker of the nation's financial institutions.
CHAPTER 9 THE WORKS PROGRESS ADMINISTRATION	70
Explores pros and cons to show how the WPA became the New Deal's most loved and hated arm, and poses questions as to the effectiveness of and need for a federal works program.
CHAPTER 10 KEYNES AND THE MULTIPLIER	78
Analyzes the issues of balancing the budget or stimulating investment, employment, and purchasing power, and looks at Roosevelt's deficits to evaluate Keynes' multiplier.

UNIT III. THE WELFARE STATE

CHAPTER 11 THE TENNESSEE VALLEY AUTHORITY

87

Explores the proposals of Henry Ford and Senator Norris for developing the Tennessee Valley, the shape the project eventually took, and the continuing question of private vs. public power.

89

CHAPTER 12 THE FARMER AND THE AGRICULTURAL ADJUSTMENT ACT

99

Studies the controversies over the AAA's revolutionary measures to cut back production and buy up surpluses, and the extent to which the program succeeded in putting the agriculture industry on its feet.

CHAPTER 13 THE FARM SECURITY ADMINISTRATION

107

Examines the nature of farm poverty, the programs developed to help its victims and eradicate its causes, and the stormy criticism of this agency which helped the impoverished farmers.

CHAPTER 14 SOCIAL SECURITY: INSURANCE OR WELFARE?

116

Presents data on the Social Security System as implemented and as compared to the radicals' alternative scheme, the Lundeen Plan, which gained wide popular support among those who thought Social Security totally inadequate.

CHAPTER 15 PROTECTING THE INVESTOR

123

What protection from unscrupulous financial operators does the investor need or deserve, and how much should the government intervene to see that he has it?

CHAPTER 16 WHO SHALL PAY? THE PROBLEM OF TAXES

130

Explores Roosevelt's controversial tax program and the furious reaction it provoked; from the point of view of justice or expediency, should the government directly intervene in the distribution of wealth, tax the haves and subsidize the have-nots?

CHAPTER 17 PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND THE SUPREME COURT

142

Describes and analyzes the confrontation between Roosevelt and the Court when it seemed that strict interpretation of the commerce clause would effectively prevent federal adjustment and regulation of the national economy.

UNIT IV. ENDURING ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

151

CHAPTER 18 THE FARM PROBLEM TODAY

153

Examines the problem of farm surpluses and surplus farmers after several decades of active government intervention in the agriculture industry.

CHAPTER 19 POVERTY U.S.A.

162

Examines the commitment of the government to the War on Poverty and explores disputes over whether the program went too far, far enough, or in the wrong direction.

170

CHAPTER 20 TAXES AND DEFICITS

Inquires into the Keynesian argument for the tax cut of 1964, the counterargument that the budget must be balanced before any cut in taxes, and the criticism that tax cutting provides little or no help to the poor.
