

EARL JACKSON, EARLY DAY ENGINEER, BACK ON JOB

Earl Jackson, civil engineer who helped with early studies on the Boulder Dam project, has returned to this job again, having arrived from Redding, California, Sunday, to take charge of river channel work below the dam, a responsibility previously of Don Walter.

Jackson worked in the canyon in 1912 on early surveys, later returning during early construction days. He left in 1935. Mrs. Jackson is expected to join him here soon.
