

DUNBAR SPENT 12 DAYS OF JERRIES, THEN 'WE

Escaping from the Nazis just a day before they reached Germany with him on the French border, Staff Sgt. Harry Dunbar of Boulder City ended a 12-day period as prisoner of the Germans and made it back to his own outfit.

The Boulder City hero of several incidents in Italy learned what it's like to be strafed along with the "Jerries," and he had enough of that.

So he made the break, just in time, and took refuge with the French, who aided him in getting back.
