

Garzette Now Has Two Limbs Again

Art Garzette, well - known transport driver employed by Six Companies Inc., will not be furnished a new wooden leg by the Arizona industrial commission after all, Dr. R. O. Schofield, chief of staff at the Boulder City hospital, stated today.

"Alabam" Wallace, dam worker, found the missing limb while at work near the lower portals of the project today. Wallace stated that he saw something caught on a snag just below the lower portal of number four tunnel. The object he saw, he stated, looked very much like a human leg. Not knowing whether a body was attached to the member, he shouted for help. The frenzied crowd which collected soon at the spot dragged out the leg, which was clothed and shod. Nothing came from the murky river bed but the leg, which Garzette immediately claimed.
