

MEETS DEATH IN RIVER WATERS

Government Employee Meets
Death at Colorado River.
Formerly Resided in Las Vegas

Sunday, May 15, at about 2:30 in the afternoon, Harold Connelley, a member of the government engineering crew employed at the Colorado River damsite at Boulder Canyon, was caught in the swift currents of the river and drowned, while swimming with some companions. One of his companions, Wesley Davis, had a narrow escape from death from drowning while trying to rescue Connelley. He had brought Connelley
