

WATER JUG! FIRE!

Don't leave your jug of water sitting in the sun where the sun's rays can be focused through it on papers or inflammables...

Doug Patton's water jug sitting in his Chevie truck back of the Central Market Tuesday at 3 p.m. warmed up the book-keeping pad that nestled alongside it in the cardboard carton—warmed it so much it caught fire . . .

Yep, the fire department got there in a hurry, put out the fire, leaving a broken jug and fire stains inside the corner of the truck.

A few weeks ago a fire at the Campbell and Felts warehouse destroyed about 6,000 concave searchlight lenses. This fire apparently was started by focusing of the sun's rays through some of the lenses.
