NEVER ANOTHER MAM-MA

BY GILBERTINE MOORE

Grandmothers can be very special people! Just such a person was Mam-ma, the grandmother so warmly and humorously written about in this book. She was an extreme individualist who ruled every household of which she was a part. She loved life and filled her ninety-two years with zestful living. You'll chuckle as story after story of Mam-ma's escapades unfold. You'll love the account of one of her ten-course luncheons when her guests nearly froze to death. You'll find yourself trying to help "Precious" (as the author was lovingly called by her grandmother) find many of the possessions Mam-ma was always misplacing. You'll enjoy trips with her, especially her yearly six-month stay in St. Petersburg, Florida. Her romantic adventure at the age of eighty-five will bring many a smile - and perhaps a tear. For Beth,

I hope you will enjoy my memories
of my grandmother,
she was quite a character.

With love,
