 of the four clubs having its own club room and having meetings during school hours. Each club has a monthly social gathering and a more formal social event once during the year. Since <sup>the day students'</sup> ~~the~~ social life is cared for by their own homes, <sup>their school</sup> ~~their~~ clubs are less finely organized than are the boarders' clubs and play a smaller part in the lives of the members. These clubs, however, compete for the athletic, scholastic, and citizenship awards. All the clubs contend for the same scholarship and athletic ~~knix~~ cups, but the boarders and day students have separate citizenship cups.

Activities.

Opportunities for the development of leadership are offered by the many campus organizations, foremost of which are the Student Council, the Y. W. C. A., and the Athletic Association. Two councils, one <sup>for the</sup> for the day students and one <sup>for the</sup> for the boarders, interpret and enforce student government. The Y. W. C. A. offers opportunities for religious and social development in the following committees which function both on and off campus; Crippled Children's Home, World Fellowship, Social Service Tours, Sunday School, Vespers, Tennessee Children's Home, Student-Industrial Commission, and Old Ladies Home. Through the Athletic Association every girl is given <sup>an</sup> opportunity to participate in as many sports as she is interested. <sup>Because the</sup> ~~Because~~ of <sup>and instruction</sup> modern equipment, she can choose from the following: hockey, tennis, archery, swimming, bowling, basketball, fencing, baseball, track, and riding,

 For those students who are mainly interested in music, there is the Glee Club of around seventy voices, and the orchestra which is the only organization of its kind in Nashville. Certain departmental clubs such as the Art Club, The Mathematics Club, the Spanish Club, the French Club, and the German Club offer other opportunities for ~~esp~~ <sup>the</sup> specialization. Wordsmiths and Penstaff clubs furnish the means for creative writing in the college and high school departments.
