

We really should feel quite honored to have the celebrities of our class with us at the reunion. Eleanor Hovey managed to come down from her position as flagpole sitter on the Capitol flagpole after breaking her old record of sitting for 9 days without coming down. But she's not the only celebrity in our group, for Sue Ransom is now famous for her magnificent portrait of Peggy Hill called "The Hoe Without The Man". And Mandy Simpson has been named among the ten best dressed taxi-cab drivers in Lebanon.

We certainly are surprised to find that two of our group remained at Harpeth Hall. Ann Kirkpatrick just couldn't bear to leave, so when she found that she couldn't become a teacher there, she accepted the janitor's position along with the official title "Willie". Also at Harpeth Hall is Joanne Hooper. We never realized that her correspondence with the Frenchman would lead to her starting a Lonely Hearts Club there.

It is extremely interesting to find what a variety of occupations our girls have chosen. We knew that Betty Chiles was daring but we never thought she'd take up motorcycle racing as a career. And we were so surprised to see Gardner Orr's picture in one of the current magazines modeling some new elasticized stockings, "guaranteed to hold in those heavy calves". It's amazing that Charleen Creagh and Mary Alice Quinn have joined a USO show to entertain the G.I.'s in Alaska with their own interpretation of the hula. And Rachael Merritt has now become an
