Handel's most famous oratorio, "Messiah," was written in 23 days for a charity performance in Dublin, Ireland. It's beauty and simplicity have made it one of the best-loved and most frequently performed concert works of all time. Tradition says that King George II, who was in attendance during the first London performance of "Messiah," was so enthusiastic that he rose to his feet during the Hallelujah Chorus, and since no one could remain seated while the monarch was standing, the rest of the audience had to stand as well. It's possible that the King merely wanted to stretch his legs, but most musicians prefer to think it was a tribute to the glorious music. Since that day, as soon as the first strains of the Hallelujah Chorus are heard, the audience stands until the end of the movement.

The Music Department at The Harpeth Hall School would like to extend a special "Thank You" to Mr. Adam Bernick of Vanderbilt University, Mr. Joe Croker, Dr. Murray Somerville and St. George's Episcopal Church, the Fine Arts Faculty of Harpeth Hall School, Laura Ashby and the Parents' Association, and Jan Ramsey.
