"The momentum is great for Belmont right now, and we are eager to continue to work with our many friends who want to partner with us in this exciting journey," President Fisher said.

Belmont celebrated reaching its initial $170 million "Keeping the Promise" capital campaign fund-raising goal with a dinner on April 4 honoring donors who gave $5,000 or more, and a faculty/staff luncheon April 5. The university raised a total of $173,098,886 for the Keeping the Promise campaign through the end of 2005, funds that have gone to a number of new projects on campus including construction of the Curb Event Center, Maddox Grand Atrium, Beaman Student Life Center, Thrailkill Residence Hall and the Gordon E. Inman Center as well as a variety of student scholarships and new and expanded academic programs.

Belmont University's Vision Statement 2010 establishes several goals including growing the university's enrollment to a total of 5,000 students and continuing the university's aggressive efforts to upgrade campus facilities. Through 2010, driven by the university's institutional master-plan, new construction will include Phase II of the Health Sciences Center, an additional residence hall, a theater, a new academic building, athletic fields, renovated dining hall, restoration of the campus bell tower and historic Belmont Mansion, an outdoor plaza and possible renovations that would add floors to existing space and remodeling of church property. ✚
