*What I remember best about my Ward-Belmont days...

Dress Code: All black or navy. (No touch of color, face or clothes). The only unchaperoned transportation was a street car. Dating! Date escorted into parlor, seated in chair next to your chair, Miss ? in her wonderful Victorian attire in chair next to you. You could invite men to dinner—all heads turned to you and the young man as you entered on your way to your table.

The only contact with Vanderbilt or Peabody if a day student asked you out for the weekend, and you attended a dance or party. Each of the clubs had a formal dance! (Not in their house). Decorations were beautiful, music was good, and no male dance partner!

Club House: I enjoyed the feeling of belonging, acknowledging people and remembering names was a necessity for members and officers—a habit carried over and enjoyed in later years.

Life at Ward-Belmont was different from life at home, but the difference was a surprising enjoyment. My love of ballet was nurtured and fond memories of hurting toes and recital bouquets are among many that I have of those two years.

me...In one month I am celebrating my 93rd birthday! I am sorry I can not join you in your coming events, but my husband who is 94 is a bed patient and I do not leave him for more than 2 or 3 days. Have a wonderful time and I will think of you!

* What I remember best about my Ward-Belmont days ...Miss Soubey, my English Teacher, gave me my first "C". I was shocked having usually made "A's" on my essays at Ransom School. We were scared to death of her, but what a great teacher! Elizabeth Lowry (later Rowan) was my P.E. teacher when I was a scared freshman. She took me under her wing which I appreciated so much. Dress code: underwear had to meet the top of your stockings, no makeup. Chewing gum was a "no no" but some of us tried to get away with it.

*Where my life has taken me...The boarding students coveted invitations from us day students so that they could get out and see the boys!

My best friends were Elizabeth Hutchinson (Hutch), Mary Ervin Stoves, and others.
