

BOSTON BOUND

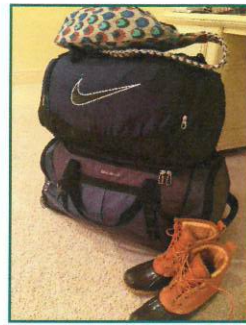

CAROLYN AND HELEN'S 2014 WINTERIM TRIP

Hey everyone! We are both juniors at Harpeth Hall who are interested in careers in medicine. This January, we are interning at Brigham and Women's hospital in Boston, MA as part of our school's 2014 Winterim program. In this blog, we will be sharing pictures and stories from our adventures in Boston. Enjoy!

Tuesday, January 7 All Packed and Ready For Snow!

T-14 hours until we are off to Boston! Our bags are packed (stuffed and bursting at the seams, actually) and we are itching to go. We have crammed our suitcases with every warm sweater we could find in our closets and plan to accessorize with plenty of fleece-lined leggings and oodles of wool socks. From infinity scarves, puffy down coats, duck boots, long underwear, ear muffs and toboggan hats, we have packed all the winter-proof necessities that we could get our hands on. We have done all the prep we can do and are anxiously awaiting the start of our trip. For now, we are very enthusiastic about the snowy weather in Boston (our attitudes may change upon arrival) and we are just hoping that we get to go sledding! The countdown is on and we are so excited for the adventures to come!

~Posted by hmist15 at 8:57 PM

Wednesday, January 8, 2014

Day 1

With sweaters and bags in hand, we hit the airport, relieved that after all of our preparation, we were finally leaving! Proudly sporting our duck boots and down coats, we settled into our seats on the plane around midday. It was only a short flight to Logan airport in Boston, but we spent the entire time talking. We had a bit of a scare at the beginning as the sweet old man next to us precariously held the remnants of his fast food meal, with the food angling towards our laps. Thankfully, we both made it to Boston pickle-free and with the hundreds of pounds of baggage with which we boarded.

Stepping out of the airport, the chill air confirmed that we had arrived in Massachusetts. With the amount of cold weather gear we packed, you would think we were prepping for camping in the Tundra. At least we know we're ready for any kind of weather Boston chooses to throw at us.

The flight ran through lunch, so we were starving by the time we checked into our hotel. (Our internship does not begin until Monday, so we are spending the first few days getting to know Boston, doing research, and touring colleges). Legal Seafoods was around the corner, so we filled up on calamari, crab cakes, and fish tacos. Fat and happy, we returned to the hotel, scouring the floors for an ice machine (which they do not have) and the fitness center.

After raiding the hotel of their store of mini

