

IF YOU WERE IN OUR RELIGIOUS SCHOOL

By Rabbi Barry L. Weinstein

How Do You Take A Vacation
From Religion?

As our religious school recess for the summer begins, certain questions present themselves.

Does religious school recess mean a vacation from religion? Is the study of Jewish learning limited to the walls of the classroom?

Obviously Jewish learning can take place both formally in school and informally at home. Our concern with religion ideally extends beyond the religious school calendar. Nevertheless, one does hear sighs of relief from teacher and student alike at the conclusion of the last class of religious school!

It is, after all, only human to find satisfaction in the completion of another year." Indeed, without moments of pause and evaluation the year itself could lose all its meaning.

But does the religious instruction of our young people really end with the ringing of the last bell? If our children's study of Judaism is possible only while they are in our school, then it certainly does. And yet, the potential for a deepened understanding of all that has been taught during the religious school year now is present.

Opportunities for family discussion of issues raised in our school now become more possible. Even your choice of vacation itineraries, as well as summer camp experiences, can include places and programs of Jewish interest.

Information about two such summer programs in particular is given elsewhere in this bulletin.

However, if your children are spending the summer at home, surprise yourself by engaging them in discussion of some of the doubts and questions you feel about religion in general and Judaism in particular. Try to set the stage for informal sharing of these concerns with your children during your vacation time this summer. The results will be as stimulating for you as the experimental rap sessions have been for members of our Couples Club

Remember that our Temple Library remains open and available to your entire family throughout the summer. And, family worship at an early hour in our chapel on Sabbath evenings is particularly meaningful.

With the wise use of your time and thoughtful planning, you will find that you really do not take a vacation from religion. Rather, your vacation and that of your children just might provide the setting for deepened understanding of your own feelings and those of your children about the meaning of our faith.

Sisterhood Past and Future: Are You There?

Being a member of Temple Israel Sisterhood means different things to each one of its members. All Sisterhood members have in some way helped to make our organization grow. Many have given hours of time, anguish, frustration, labor and love. Others have found that they have little or no time to give, but have supported our projects by their important dues and donor gifts. Still others have been willing to work and have not been called upon. To you we are very sorry. Please come forward and volunteer again. You are all badly needed. We thank all of you for making the past year run so smoothly.

This has been a busy and fruitful year. Thirty-two new members have joined Sisterhood. I have tried to welcome each new member of Sisterhood personally. Your Sisterhood board has tried to contact every Sisterhood member to see where she would like to help or what Sisterhood might do for her. There are still some members we have missed, and we are still trying to contact everyone. Again, please pick up the phone and call me or any board member and be counted as a member willing to serve.

Looking back just seven months ago, our courtyard was decorated by a lovely Succah, and apples and flags were given to our Religious school children. Our children also received Chanukah treats and participated in a model Seder which was prepared and served by Sisterhood. Sisterhood sponsored our first Teachers' Sabbath. Over seven hundred people attended, and our students gained a strong feeling of pride by showing their public school teachers their own special Temple.

Our N.F.T.Y. group has received $1000 from us as well as help and guidance where it was needed. A party was held during winter vacation for our college students to give them the opportunity to share ideas with the Rabbis and each other.

Many of you remember a lovely evening at the Firehouse theater when Sisterhood members, husbands and friends enjoyed dinner together and were entertained by "Mr. Roberts." The gift shop has blossomed, and orders are being filled continually for special objects that are not currently in stock.

Books, books, and more books has become our motto. The Book Bash held at Crossroads Mall was a tremendous success. Many, many workers are needed in all areas of the book sale for the coming year. Don't wait to be called. All books are to be brought to Temple and marked there. If you need books picked up call the Temple Office.

Three luncheons, a large reception, two dinners, a Seder and regular weekly Oneg Shabbats were carried out by Sisterhood members. Two hundred church women attended the annual Interfaith Tea, and three hundred ministers were served lunch at the annual Ministers' Institute. Our members gave a party at the Dr. Philip Sher home and at Veteran's Hospital. The Temple kitchen is equipped and maintained by the Sisterhood.

This isn't all. Tables must be set, publicity must be arranged, programs planned and telephoning never ends. The list continues. You may be very proud. Your hard work has made it possible for us to give $2000 to our religious school, and to meet our commitment to the National Federation of Temple Sisterhoods.

However, more important than anything I have mentioned is that you, our Sisterhood member, are happy, content and fulfilled in Sisterhood. You are terribly important to us. Please make us important to you. A year has ended since I first became your President. We begin again to plan for the coming year. Together, all four hundred of us can become an even more vital part of our congregation in the coming year.

Mrs. Martin Lehr

Our Congregation congratulates William Jay Hollenbeck, fourth grade student in our Religious School, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Hollenbeck, upon achievement of the Cub Scout Aleph Award.

The Aleph Award is presented to members of the Cub Scouts of America who give demonstration of their knowledge of Judaism. It is the first step towards the Ner Tamid Award.

In order to achieve this medal, Jay demonstrated detailed familiarity with various aspects of Judaism, including Torah, prayer, holidays, the synagogue, and the land of Israel.

This award was presented to Jay under the auspices of the Cub Scouts by Rabbi Brooks and Rabbi Weinstein during the Sunday session of Religious School on May 14, 1973. Jay is a member of Den 2 Webelos, Pack Number 376, of the Cub Scouts.

A Personal Message from Rabbi Brooks

MY CALENDAR CHANGES

This is a somewhat annoying time of year for me. My calendar runs from Rosh Hashonah to Rosh Hashonah as do most Jewish calendars. It is a source of never ending puzzlement to me that the printers of these calendars are so remiss in getting them out on time. Because, you see, I am already planning and making engagements for next season, even beyond a year from now. And I have no calendar. So we make our own pro tem.

Maybe the printer, like myself, looks forward to the seasonal hiatus, the summertime when the pace changes and activity slows up a bit. There are less meetings, most of which are unnecessary anyway. There is less "organized" activity. There is a chance to think, to contemplate past and future, to take a measure of where one is and what path to take ahead. There is time for travel, to meet people one has not known, to encounter new ideas.

There are those who say the summertime in large measure is wasted. They declare that we ought to use the time in the Synagogue for organized teaching, preaching, and other structural activity. I think that's swell, if someone else does it!

For myself, after a long season of seven days and seven nights a week of responsibility for the structured purposes of Jewish activity, I welcome a chance to be a bit less the slave of my watch and my calendar. I think that's healthy and necessary to stay alive. In fact, I believe we are over stimulated and over organized anyway. But of that subject another time.

I do not mean to say the summer months should be wasted. Far from it. For me they will be days and nights of deep concern over many problems, planning for next season, preparation of many lessons and, above all, reading carefully many books that have piled up only because of lack of time to take them into my hands. The Temple offices and services continue as always.

I look forward to our worship during the summer months in the small sanctuary of our Temple. It's intimate, warm, lovely and, to me, spiritually satisfying. I wish we could pray there all year long. But it's not large enough for most winter-time services.

I wish for your summer the same as I wish for myself: an opportunity for some quiet thought, a time to enrich oneself with the thoughts of others in fine worthwhile books, a time for spiritual renewal with each other at our Shabbat services without all the pomp and ceremony of the winter style. I wish for you health and pleasure, friendship and a sense of well being.

All this until once again in the fall I face my typewriter and hope I can write something worth your time to read.

Confirmation Service to be June 5

Confirmation Services will be held at Temple Israel on the Festival of Shavuot, Tuesday June 5, at 8:00 p.m. A reception will follow services.

Youth Group Prepares
To Greet New Members

Members of our Temple Youth Group enjoyed a splendid final banquet Saturday evening, May 13, at the New Tower Motel. After dinner formal farewells were given to departing seniors and special gifts were given them by members of our youth group. Susie Cohn served as chairman of the dinner.

Following the banquet, installation of officers for the coming year was held in the sanctuary of Temple. Upon the completion of installations, the entire youth group enjoyed a house party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ajon Farber.

Members of our youth group and Rabbi Weinstein would like to thank all of the adults who have so graciously helped make each of our functions a success during the past year. We know that your help and support helps make our youth group a warm, rewarding experience for us all.

Special invitations will be mailed to all incoming freshmen for spring rush and orientation, to be held on Saturday, June 2. We look forward to seeing each of our new freshmen with us at that time for an evening of relaxation, together with an introduction to our Temple Youth Group and its programs.

ANYTOWN NEBRASKA

ANYTOWN is not just any place. It's a special place — a camp . . . a town . . . an attempt to build a unique community . . . a place which brings together students from all cultural, ethnic, racial, religious and economic backgrounds, from Nebraska's big cities and tiny towns — to build a bridge of understanding and acceptance of others as individuals, not as stereotypes.

ANYTOWN NEBRASKA for 1973 will assemble at Newman Camp near Louisville, Nebraska June 10-16. There will be:

- Informal sessions
- Workshops
- Discussion groups

Qualified adult advisers assist, inform and join the counselors in leading discussion groups. For every 10 youth participants there is a minimum of one adult adviser and one college age counselor.

High school sophomores and juniors selected by participating schools and the sponsoring agencies may apply. The cost to the delegate is $50, including housing, food, a full recreational program, health and accident insurance and most transportation. Please see Rabbi Weinstein for further details.
