As I See It...

Despite the debate among us, most of us know who is Jewish. We have our own way of picking one out in the crowd. We are, however, much more hazy when it comes to deciding what is Judaism; often we are lost among the host of competing descriptions and definitions. Jewish identity is less of a problem to us than Jewish essence.

Rabbi Azriel

Yet it is essence that is the main theme of the High Holy Days. We know that as Jews we should appear in Synagogue and be together with fellow Jews. We can respond to the need for identity, but often we are dissatisfied with the message that is being offered. We have difficulty in believing. We crave for a simple formula that does not merely analyze why we came to shul, but which demonstrates the reason why we should stay and why we should come back.

Unfortunately, there is no such simple statement and every attempt to coin a phrase that encapsulates the totality of Judaism has proven futile. The traditional text of the Sh'ma offers, however, a starting point: "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, with all your soul and with all your might." As we come together to greet the year 5773, let us explore the meaning of these words for they tell us what Judaism demands of us. The phrase is not self-explanatory and each of its words needs definition and elucidation: What is love? Who is God? How do I deploy heart, soul and might? Yet the sentence offers a framework and a basis for our lives.

We should speak of love as we experience it in our human relationships and what it really means to respond to another being as a beginning of religious experience.

We should also explore the significance of the words, "the Lord your God." I know that so many of us yearn for transcendence but are put off by pious talk and philosophical generalizations. Is there a way of recognizing the reality that is God without being subjected to mental acrobatics and emotional blackmail? And I would like to know how one can love God "with all your heart and all your soul and all your might."

I do not want to lure us to synagogues with the false promise that there, after five or six services, all will be revealed. All that I can do is issue an invitation to wrestle with the challenges, to reflect and perhaps, also, to decide. What is Judaism? It cannot be answered with a slogan because that would be dogmatic. A dogma, certainly at the expense of truth, is alien to our tradition. But the question can be confronted. It is only in confrontation that the essence is made clear and the identity affirmed.

It happened to the Biblical Jacob when he wrestled with the angel. It can happen to each of us when we struggle with questions of Jewish essence. And as Jacob became Israel in the process, so too can we.

L'Shanah Tovah Tikatevu!

Presidents Report

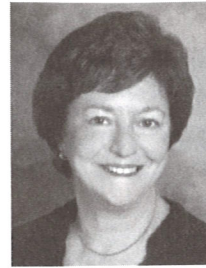

As I sit down to write this first Tidings article, Omaha has just had its first rain in almost two months. Along with many of my neighbors, I stood at the front door watching the rain come down, celebrating the cool air and sound of rain hitting the pavement at last! It was a good reminder of the gratitude we should always feel about the simple things in our lives that we take for granted.

The gratitude I feel for the people working so hard to make our new home a reality cannot be expressed in words. The Building Council, consisting of Tom Fellman, Murray Newman, Sylvia Roffman, Harley Schrager, Terri Schrager, Ted Seldin, Bruce Simon, and Todd Simon, have provided leadership and vision to this project in innumerable ways! Katherine Finnegan, Dan and Sarah Gilbert, Stacey Rockman, Harley Schrager, Jeff Schrager, and Andrea and Mike Siegel have worked tirelessly to help us raise the funds needed to make this dream come true. Katherine Finnegan, Jon Meyers, John Waldbaum and Ted Zetzman and have spent countless hours as our Building Coordinating Committee, overseeing all of the details required to design and create the building. Bob Freeman and John Waldbaum are working on the sale of our current building and we will hopefully be able to announce a successful conclusion to that part of the project soon. I speak for the entire Board of Trustees when I say that we can never thank all of these people enough for their commitment to Temple Israel's future and for the hundreds of hours they have given and continue to give.

Before becoming President of the congregation, I attended the Scheidt seminar, which is the Union of Reform Judaism's training for incoming Presidents. The Scheidt seminar is an invaluable opportunity to learn from URJ staff members and, most importantly, from other congregational leaders. Like many other Temple Israel Presidents, I left Scheidt feeling very proud and very grateful for the congregation we have. Because we are the only Reform congregation in Omaha, we are truly a "big tent." We have members who represent the broadest spectrum of Reform Judaism in the United States: those who find meaning through worship, those who express their Judaism through social justice, those who are looking for community and those who join so that their children can receive a great Jewish education. I was asked many times, "How do you keep all of those people happy?" "Do you have splits in the congregation?"

My answer was, of course, that we can't make everyone happy and that we have had and will continue to have many difficult discussions with both congregants and staff when tough decisions are made. But we try very hard to have those discussions in an honest and respectful way, remembering that we are partners in a holy endeavor with the goal of creating a strong, vibrant Reform Jewish community in Omaha, NE. I welcome your input at any time, be it positive or negative - I truly believe that our diversity is our strength and I look forward to sharing this journey with each one of you! The Board of Trustees joins me in wishing you all a very happy and healthy New Year!

Vicki Ducharme Retires After 21 Years

We would like to extend our deepest gratitude and thanks to Vicki Ducharme, Temple Israel bookkeeper for more than 20 years, who retired at the end of August.

"She has been my right arm and a lot more. Vicki has been such a stable and reliable person and will be missed," said Temple Israel Executive Director Dennis DePorte.

"She is very passionate about keeping the Temple's books," added Board of Trustees Treasurer Alan Fredricks. "She prides herself on accuracy and meeting all deadlines. When asked, she will go out of her way to get an answer as fast as humanly possible. She is very confident in her knowledge of our books and is able to work independently to get everything done each and every day."

Over the years, Vicki shared with us her passion for homemade ice cream and quilt-making. Her absence from Temple Israel will be felt by us all.

"She is a tough act to follow," Fredricks said, "but we believe that Sheryl Kroen is up to the task."

Sheryl Koehn joins Temple Israel after 15 years with United Way. She has been training with Vicki throughout August, and we welcome her to our team.

Temple Teen Night teaches Reform Jewish values deepening the relationships among our temple teens and, in turn, their relationship with Judaism. Our curriculum is designed to go beyond the pediatric Judaism learned in Religious School and bridge the gap between childhood and adult learning. Most classes are taught by Rabbi Azriel, Rabbi Brown or Cantor Shermet, giving our students the best opportunity to create a lifelong bond with our clergy.

The overarching goal of Omaha Jewish Connections is to prepare high school students to be knowledgeable, thinking, involved and responsible Jewish adults. OJC events will be presented in harmony with the synagogues' educational programs, and the learning opportunities will include innovative experiences. Lay and professional representatives from Beth El, Beth Israel, Temple Israel and the Center for Jewish Life have been engaged in a series of creative planning sessions to develop what will be a groundbreaking approach to meeting the needs of Jewish high school students.

Join us at our coffee shop. After class on Wednesdays students will find Temple Teen Night is a place to unwind and hang out as well as talk about current events with their friends as they get to know each other and our clergy a little better. Beit Café is that place. At Beit Café you can grab a bite to eat, schmooze with friends, clergy and various guest speakers, like the shlichah, or simply work on your homework. Beit Café is a place where you can just be yourself.

New Members

Robert Dorton and Avery Mazor moved to Omaha in 2008 because they were ready for a change of pace and wanted to be closer to family. Robert, originally from Ft. Dodge, IA, and Avery, born in Manhattan but raised in Santa Monica, met in San Francisco. Avery attended NYU Film School before transferring to San Francisco State University, where he received his degree in industrial art. He later received his MFA in art from Mills College. He currently works as an assistant professor of art and design at UNO. Meanwhile, Robert has a law degree from the University of California at Berkeley, as well as a bachelor's degree in history and peace studies from the University of Notre Dame. He opened his own law office in 2011. In their downtime, Robert likes cooking and reading, while Avery enjoys painting, drawing, digital printmaking, photography, sculpture and installation. They also enjoy dining out and spending time with family and friends.

B'nai Mitzvah בני מצוה

Alexander and Zachary Belgrade, sons of Robyn Belgrade and James Belgrade, celebrated their B'nai Mitzvah together on August 18. The twins are in eighth grade at Westside Middle School. Alex and Zach volunteered for Ted

E. Bear Hollow, collecting donated items that were on the organization's wish list. The boys also helped out in the office and attended several KidsKamps, where they did arts and crafts projects with grieving children.

Alan and Sonia Tipp moved to Omaha five years ago to be closer to family. They wanted their children, Adria, six and a half, and Asher, four and a half, to grow up with their cousins. Alan works from home designing sunglasses for a variety of companies, including Under Armour, Crocs and Hobie, and he frequently travels to China to check in on the factories. He also attends trade shows in New York City, Las Vegas and Milan, Italy. Sonia grew up in Maryland, but her mother grew up in Omaha. In fact, Alan and Sonia's mothers were best friends as children and the families stayed in touch over the years. In their free time, Alan and Sonia enjoy spending time with family and friends, entertaining at home, and being out on the lake.

Jacob Wigodsky, son of Tereza Wigodsky and Andrew Wigodsky became a Bar Mitzvah on August 25. For his mitzvah project, Jacob, an eighth grader at Westside Middle School, rescued young kittens that would otherwise have been put to sleep. Jacob took in and cared for the kittens until they were old enough to be placed in loving homes. He felt it was important to give the innocent animals a chance at a happy future.
