IT SEEMS TO ME . . .

A Personal Message from Rabbi Brooks

In the introductory pages of his Meaning of Jewish History Jacob Agus has written magnificently on the two faces of Judaism. One is the rational and pragmatic; the other is the emotional and the mystical. Neither, he correctly points out, is dispensable. But, I would add, surely we must know when to respond to each.

Passover is a case in point. For the past several weeks in my capacity as Auxiliary Jewish Chaplain at Offutt AFB I have received numerous requests from service personnel for leave to travel to their homes for Seder. One commander pointed out that most of these men show no "religious" inclinations at any other time. He may be right. But in one important respect he is wrong. Rationally and practically Passover could be celebrated here or anywhere. But the emotional ties to home are just SEDER CUP. The wine symbolizes Joy: "And wine that make joyful the heart of man." (Psalm 104:15). We drink four cups of wine because of the four promises made to our ancestors when they were freed from Egyptian slavery. Pictured above is a very rare specimen of a Seder Cup in the Kuttner family for generations. It is gilded inside, by an unknown craftsman in Augsburg, Germany, in the 18th century. It is worthwhile to view many other Passover items in our museum.

ROSENSTOCK FAMILY AND FRIENDS ENDOW INSTITUTE ON JUDAISM FOR CHRISTIAN CLERGYMEN

On April 17, 1970 Temple Israel will sponsor its 31st Annual Institute for Christian Clergymen. In keeping with the highest standards of academic excellence, the lecturer this year will be Dr. Herbert C. Brichto, Professor of Bible at the Hebrew Union College, the Rabbinic Seminary for liberal rabbis in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Dr. Brichto will lend scholarly and innovative insights into the subject matter for both the morning and afternoon sessions: "How Does God Speak to Man," and "What Happened at Sinai."

In his invitation to the clergy, Rabbi Sidney H. Brooks eloquently explained the renaming of the institute. "So widely has this search for deeper understanding of our religious heritage become and so firm its acceptance on the part of the Christian clergy, that the family and friends of the late Charles Rosenstock have endowed this program in his memory." The Institute will henceforth be known as The Charles Rosenstock Memorial Institute on Judaism for Christian Clergymen.

Mrs. Rosenstock has graciously consented to be among the guests at the head table for luncheon, along with The Most Rev. Daniel E. Sheehan, D.D., Archbishop of Omaha; Rev. Arnold Nelson, President of the Omaha Ministerial Union; Dr. Ernest E. Smith, Executive Secretary of the Omaha Metropolitan Association of

Dr. Herbert C. Brichto

Churches, Inc.; and Rev. Z. W. Williams, President of the Omaha Ministerial Alliance.

On Friday Evening at our Sabbath Services Dr. Brichto will be guest preacher speaking on the subject THE MEANING OF THE EXODUS, and a reception will be held in his honor following the services.

HAD GADYO IN RHYME
A Kidling, A Kidling!

'Twas purchased by my father
Two pieces was the price,
The cat crept up so slyly
And ate it in a trice.
In rushed the dog with anger
To save the little goat;
He sprang up to the cat then
And bit her in the throat.
A stick was lying handy
That owed the dog a grudge;
He gave him such a thrashing
Before he thence could budge.
But in the glowing embers
The stick his end soon found;
The fire rushed and burnt him
To ashes on the ground.
But soon a wave of water
Came pouring from a spout;
It hissed about the embers
And put the fire out.
A thirsty ox that saw this
From drinking did not stop,
Till there was no more water;
He left no single drop.
The slaughterer soon seized him,
That man with knife so keen;
He drew that knife and quickly
The ox had slaughtered been.
But then drew near death's angel
For die is what men must;
He in his turn was vanquished
The butcher soon was dust.
The Holy One seeth,
He bade death cease from slaying.
When thus the butcher died
That killed the ox so thirsty,
That drank the water's tide,
That quenched the fire that burnt
up
The stick that beat the dog,
That bit the cat that ate the kid
My father bought of yore.
