UAHC Center to Be Dedicated

Leaders of Reform Judaism will gather in Washington the weekend of November 30 to December 2 for the formal dedication of the UAHC Religious Action Center and to honor Mr. and Mrs. Kivie Kaplan, whose generosity made the Center possible.

Harlan Cleveland, Assistant Secretary of State, will address the banquet session on the responsibilities of religious institutions in educating and sensitizing their constituents on the importance of world peace.

Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath, President of the UAHC, will speak on the mission of Judaism in building a better world.

"Justice, Justice shalt thou pursue," is the over-all theme of workshops and discussions, which will examine the respective roles of religion and government in American life.

A highlight of the four-day program will be a session entitled "Religion Meets the Press," in which Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish religious leaders will engage in frank dialogue with each other and with a panel of eminent reporters.

The actual dedication of the Center at 2027 Massachusetts Avenue, NW, will take place Saturday afternoon, December 1. Supreme Court Justice Arthur Goldberg, UAHC Board Chairman Emil N. Baar, and Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath will participate in the service of dedication. A plaque of tribute to Emily and Kivie Kaplan will be unveiled. The historic Torah which had been presented to President Kennedy at the 6th UAHC Biennial in Washington in 1961 will be installed in a special Ark in the Center.
