It was September 11, somewhat around 8:25 am while in the library I was working on a paper about the Independence when a secretary came over and told us that a American Airlines plane had just crashed into one of the two twin buildings in New York, and told the librarian to turn on the t.v. at first I didn't think it well, but when I saw the t.v I couldn't believe my eyes there was people terrified, running, and screaming after a few minutes the second plane crashed into the other building it was a total shock to all of us I felt scared, that another plane would crash near us and I won't lie I even cried when I saw all those people crying looking for there family members I imagined my self in there shoes knowing that my mom, my dad or even my self being in there with no way out and what happened that day is never to forget.
