Marie and Barbara went together to place the cemetery plaque for their sister, Elizabeth, in the cemetery in Westhampton to commemorate her life. She is not buried there. Part of her cremains were scattered at her home, 9 Bayberry Lane, West Islip, New York, by her son, Joseph. He took her remaining cremains to his home in Portal, Arizona, to scatter them on his property there.

Marie placed the cemetery plaque for her brother, Henry, in Westhampton Cemetery. Half of his cremains were buried there, resting on the cement vault of his mother. The remaining cremains were scattered at sea by his nephew, William MacPherson.

Douglas Terrell was Archie's brother. He was married to Mae, who was a teacher. They never had any children.

Edith was Archie's sister. She was married to Alex Glendinning, who served as the postmaster in East Quogue. They had one son, Gordon, who lives in Florida and is in his eighties.

Marguerite was a sister of Archie's.

Archie's parents were Herman Terrell and Gertrude Smith. Gertrude may have had thirteen pregnancies. She was from Center Mooriches and was related to the Chichester families there.

Madelyn was a sister of Archie's and had one daughter, probably with her first husband, Hilborn. Her second husband was Harry Freeman.

Dorothy was a sister of Archie's. Believe she married a William Powell and may be buried in Eastport Cemetery. She also went by the name Dot. They had one daughter, Shirley, who married a Carter.
