Except for K-Highway which is paved and goes to the North & South of Amazonia the other roads are either dirt or rock. all these roads within 5 miles or so of Amazonia I list as Amazonia Road or (A.K.)

Today was partly cloudy and nice. Temperatures were low about 69° high about 89°. At Squaw Creek this afternoon + evening we had a light rain. I banded 79M until 9AM by myself at Krug Park. Then at 10AM Pearl + I took off + banded east of town, Amazonia Road, Honey Creek, River Road, and on up to Squaw Creek. I think I would have had more birds that I finally wound up with if it wasn't for the rain. I had to walk about a quarter mile out onto a flat to get near the shore, birds and at that time it was raining too hard to use my scope and binoculars to the best advantage. Also because of the rain we came home about one to two hours earlier than was necessary. Even so this is the first date after June 8th 1969 that I have ever hit 100 species or better.

Today the weather was variable. Up until about 11 AM it was cloudy with two or three real good showers. (at Squaw Creek they had $1\frac{1}{2}$ " of rain early A.M.). It cleared off then and got hot & humid. We left home at 12:45 P.M., drove to Squaw Creek where I walked out about half a mile onto a mud flat & banded for water birds only. We arrived back home at 6 P.M. Temperatures low high Today was mostly clear & nice. Cloudy late afternoon with light showers. Pearl & I went to Sy. Creek this afternoon 1 PM to 7 PM. I didn't walk out on the mud flat so therefore I missed many birds.

Today was clear, windy & warm. The temperatures today were low about 70° high about 86°. I slept until 8 AM. Pearl & I birded @ 10 AM until noon east of town & back home. We then took off for Squaw Creek by way of Amazonia Road and Honey Creek. At Squaw Creek I met Mark Robbins and a couple more boys from Maryville, Mo. I birded for awhile with them. We got back home about 7:15 PM. At Squaw Creek it takes a lot of walking now to get most of the shore birds as they are so far from the roads.
