Mr. Mark E. Zimmerman
White Cloud, Kansas.
Dear Mr. Zimmerman;—

In reply to your very interesting letter of the 17th, Inst. will say that you are right, there are only a few of us who seem to be interested in Mound Builder Symbolism and geometry. They do not appear to realize that these symbols express their language and message left by them for us to read, and only those who can read these symbols can interpret the knowledge they intended to convey. So we should consider ourselves very fortunate to be gifted with an insight above the multitude.

Dr. Higgins and Mr. Keplinger's writings have been a great help to me in my studies along this line.

As you state the skulls shown in photograph would pass very well for European white skulls, however from what we have learned from a survey of all of the skulls so far unearthed there appear to be many different types of races of decedents of different races. Some of the skulls are low receding back from immediately above the eyes, others show a very high type showing good intellect and large brain capacity, others have bony projections like little horns extending out from the heads on each side in front of and a little above the ears, this last type has been of great interest to everyone and a puzzle to all who have inspected them. I am enclosing you a photograph taken of one of these skulls ~~taken~~ just as it lies in the ground, never having been disturbed only as far as shown, and ~~in~~ in its place in the circle. Perhaps you have seen something of this kind in your experience, and we would be glad for you to advise us if you have ever come across anything of this kind. And as this appears to be a development unknown before and not found elsewhere.

From my studies of the mound builders from the Great Lakes south to Florida and east of the Mississippi River, I believe like you do that they were from the British Isles or Western Europe, and this superior knowledge of Nature's Laws and geometry, was practised and taught to their decedents who followed after them and they intermarried with other races but still observed the habits and customs as taught and impressed upon them by these master minds. Starting from the section central and south of the Great Lakes they spread out from Ohio all over the eastern part of the United States and southward to Florida, and it may be that Florida was where they finally made their last stand, as this section of the S.W. Coast region of this state has more than a hundred mounds yet unexplored. In my opinion you are very nearly correct in your conclusions that the ancient Masons came over from Wales to form an empire here in America at that time. And I am, like you, not so desirous of proving that they were mongoloid Indians, although it seems that at the last period there was some traces of this race among them, as well as other races, which is evident in our Tampa Mound.

Your friend's discoveries in Mexico are very interesting the skulls found there in the lower levels showing two separate brain cavities. In the late book by John H. Annis, D.O. just published last year called the "Mystic Key", he tells of the legend of the Lost Atlantis, the continent which is supposed to have sunk in the Atlantic Ocean some 10 or 12 thousand years ago. This book tells of the civilization on this continent had dated back for three hundred thousand years. That they had developed their psychic faculties beyond anything known to-day. It is said that the veil was lifted between the two worlds. There was a constant intercommunication between the living and the so called dead. In their earlier history telegraphs, telephones, Etc., were needed and used, but for thousands of years of their later existence these had been discarded as bunglesome affairs of no practical service. Everyone was his own telephone. What we now call telepathy was a universal power practiced by all. Not only did they practice telepathy, but they were able to project their astral bodies with such force as to enable those with whom they were conversing to see and recognize them, by sight as well as sound. Perhaps these old Mexicans were of this race.

A friend of mine who has traveled and explored the countries around the Caribbean Sea, said to me that a fisherman down there related to him a story of where he was caught out in their boat in a storm and to save their boat and themselves they anchored in deep water with a very long cable. The next morning after the storm had subsided and the sea was very calm, and they could look down and see the bottom a hundred or more feet below, they saw that their anchor had caught in the window of a house in a submerged city below the surface. This man said that he was sure that he could go back there to the same spot where this sunken city was located. This legend of the Lost Atlantis and its destruction is described in The Mayan and Greek Alphabets, and also was a legend of the Florida aborigines. The prehistoric race that lived here had the same knowledge of a catastrophe of a sinking and an upheaval of the land. Florida seems to have been thrown up at some time as our Phosphate Mines show great areas where marine animals and fish were caught and died in large numbers massed together. As you may know 85% of the United States deposits of bone phosphate are shipped from Florida through the Port of Tampa every year.

Yes, the Bible Students, the British Israel World Federation, the Religious organizations as well as many of the British Military men and others are predicting from the Bible and the Great Pyramid, (Called by some the Bible in Stone) from its inch measurement, that are predicting the great war of Armageddon to begin May 29th. this year and to continue for eight years until 1936. We will soon see whether their dire predictions are correct or not. It seems that the world should have had enough of war during the last world war to last them for at least a hundred years, and civilization should be civilized enough to settle their differences by a conference of a few men before the war starts, as that is the way they are always settled in the end by a few men seated around a table.

Albert Pike's suggestions that Jehovah created the universe within himself and Einstein's theory of relativity both coincide in this respect. All are combined within the circle and a part of Him, as shown by Astrology of the Grand Man, the Macrocosm, and the little man, the Microcosm. Astrology and Astronomy, its offspring, which came from it, gives us a greater understanding of God's and Nature's Laws, all Religions and Masonry than any other science in the world. From my studies of Astrology all of the above are founded upon it which can be proved to any fair minded truthseeker, or scientist who will investigate with an open mind, as Dr. Higgins so plainly shows and states in his article in the old Azoth Magazine. "When once the system is rightly understood, as it is beginning to be by students of broad view and open mind, they are enabled to read the Mound Builders Tumulus, the Druidic Circle, the Pagan Temple, or the Christian Cathedral like an open book."

In regard to the triangular stone which your son picked up it is no doubt a Jehovah Triangle. An old friend of mine Mr. Standfast who is a deep student of circles and square geometry, says it is. Mr. Standfast has a geometric design worked out by a friend of his Mr. Felt's, of New York, and he said it was a plan of the Universe. That when this design was placed over the hieroglyphics of Egypt they could be read and their meaning was made plain. From Paul F. Case's Book "An introduction to a study of the Tarot" he states that the great name of the God of Israel occurs more than five thousand times in the Bible. Kabbalists call it the Tetragrammaton, or quadrilateral name. Other divine names, such as ADNI, AHIH, and AGLA also contain four letters, but there is only one Tetragrammaton. It is spelt Yod-He-Vau-He-- in English letters, I-H-V-H. The Bible ascribes peculiar power to this name; and tradition says that to pronounce it is to possess a key to all wisdom. In the occult sense, to pronounce the name is to grasp its inner meaning. It is really a cypher, which conceals the profoundest mysteries of Kabbalistic doctrine.

Jupiter, or God- Jehovah - by, or from Jove. Jod-He-Vau-He. IOVA,

We have a class here studying Kabbalism and the Tarot and these subjects are of absorbing interest.

Will close for this time as no doubt I have taken up too much of your valuable time already. With Best Good Wishes to you and hoping that you may be able to throw some light on the bony projections or horns on our specimens of skulls found in our Tampa Mound, and awaiting your reply with interest, I remain,

Very Truly Yours,
