

WOODLAWN GRADUATES

MARY MADIGAN thought the following information would be of interest to those who taught at Loretto, Woodlawn, during the "transition" years.

Recently, while visiting various centers for alternative education as part of my job as Education Coordinator at Mercy Girls' Home, I met two Woodlawn graduates of whom we as IBVM and especially those who taught them at Loretto, Woodlawn, can be especially proud.

Helen Ellis Stanton is the principal of Olive Harvey Middle College and Janice Moore Donald is the director of the Libra Therapeutic School. Both women spoke glowingly of the education and the faculty and friends who influenced them at Woodlawn. Their responsible positions and the genuine care they exercise toward their faculties and students attest that they were stimulated by and now live out "the instruction of others unto justice."

Transitions: New Meanings in Later Life

Date: Tuesday, April 3, 1990 Place: St. Xavier College
Time: 7:00 P.M. to 9:00 P.M. Formal Reception Room
Cost: $ 5.00 3700 W. 103rd St.
Presenter: Ms. Janis McGillick, A.M. Chicago, IL

The session will explore attitudes and myths of aging, positive planning and discernment for a protective "Third Age". Positive and negative stressors associated with aging will be examined and strategies for pursuing meaningful ministries for later life will be identified. The conceptual framework for the presentation will be aging as a life-long process, not a problem. The formal presentation will be augmented through use of video materials and attendee participation.

The session will be conducted by Ms. Janis McGillick, A.M., Project Coordinator, Intercommunity Retirement Project for Religious. Ms. McGillick is a geriatric social worker and program planner.
