The Barkentine served as a fishing barge off Redondo Beach until 1928, when a severe storm beached her. There she was partly burned so that she would give up some of her precious copper fittings and fastenings. What remained was rock-ballasted, towed to sea and scuttled.

I hope that the foregoing will be of value to you. Further information is being developed and will be forwarded. You may be interested to know that one of the seamen who participated in the record voyage to Honolulu, became one of our skippers, retired from Company service and now, at 80 years of age operates a tug on San Francisco Bay which docks Company tankers at Rodeo, California. These were a strong breed of men!

Sincerely,

DSP:th
