Dear Mr. MacMullen:

Just a line to let you know how much I enjoy your Sunday column. Am now in the process of cleaning out my desk and got a fresh chuckle out of one I had clipped concerning Guy Fawkes Day — That one took the rog right off the bush!

I have also enjoyed those dealing with the old sailing vessels. My Great-great-grandmother Pratt brought the first pepper trees to California on her return by sail ship from Tahiti (after having first crossed the plains in a covered wagon). She kept a daily journal in prim and proper prose, a copy of which makes delightful reading.

I'm from a little northern Arizona town named Snowflake in honor of my Grandfather Flake and Mormon Church President Snow. My brother-in-law is a history buff who collects old tales involving cowboys and Indians. He visits me occasionally.

At present, I'm living in an interesting old mansion in Coronado and would like to extend an invitation for a spot of tea (or something stronger) if you and Mrs. MacMullen are ever in this neighborhood.

Sincerely,
Wona Campbell
