Dear Mr MacMullen,

I must apologise for the delay in replying to your letters. This has been caused by the fact that we are currently transferring the library to new premises, which has meant that we have been at sixes and sevens, and indeed it will be a while still before we are thoroughly straight.

However, I have been able to ascertain from an account of the launching of the "Euterpe" in another paper, "The Mona's Herald," that Mrs Brown was indeed the wife of Captain Brown, and that this latter was partner in the firm which owned the ship - Wakefield, Nash & Co., of Liverpool. There are no further details, nor are their Christian names given. It is just possible you may be able to get more about them from Mr G. Hampson, Archivist, Liverpool Record Office, City Library, William Brown Street, Liverpool. I enclose a typed transcript of the account ("Mona's Herald," December 23rd, 1863) of the towing of the "Euterpe" from Ramsey to Liverpool, which I know will interest you.
