

U.S. President Millard Fillmore Public Domain

first reluctant to get involved, but finally they acted. After some international complications, Georgiana's crew eventually was released and returned to Lincolntonville.

Advertisement

So next time you find yourself on Route 1 driving through quiet little Lincolntonville Beach, take a moment to remember and appreciate the enormous activity and production of those long-ago shipyards that dotted the shoreline. Maybe on warm, soft summer evenings, you might even catch a whiff from the piles of wood chips or stacked lumber or maybe hear sounds of hammering or sawing echoing along the water.

Charles H. Lagerbom teaches AP U.S. History at Belfast Area High School and lives in Northport. He can be contacted at clagerbom@rsu71.org. He is author of "Whaling in Maine," available through Historypress.com.