

Stubby cranes and motorized lift-trucks daily haul boxes loaded with hundreds of pounds of scrap metals, salvaged from the Douglas Aircraft Company Tulsa plant airplane building operations, to a "junk pile" at one corner of the premises. Here they are sorted and dumped into trucks which speed the critical materials back to the smelters to be fitted for further use in the nation's all-out-for-victory production program.

Date 10-13
Serial No. T5465
General view of Douglas scrap salvage