Employees Receive Thanks from Red Cross Director

Employee participation in the recent Red Cross Drive has resulted in the following letter to Dr. N. P. White, Division Physician, from G. M. Langdon, administrative director of the Tulsa Regional Red Cross Blood Center:

"On behalf of the Tulsa Regional Red Cross Blood Center, I would like to thank you and all your co-workers who did such a fine job of recruiting and scheduling blood donors for our mobile visit. The results were the best we have had at North American Rockwell in a long time.

"Three hundred and forty seven units of blood were drawn; ninety of these being first time donors. As you know, this is very important because, due to the increased usage of blood and blood products, there is a need for new donors.

"Please convey our sincere appreciation to all who participated, both as recruiters and as blood donors.

"Again, thank you for your support of the blood program."

Scouts Marvel at Rodeo Dads

"Which donkey was on top?" asked R. W. Healey, Contracts project administrator. Healey is the Webelos Den Master of Cub Scout Pack 61. Early this month he took seven Cub Scouts to the Jim Shoulders Rodeo in Okmulgee, Okla.

The rodeo is an annual event staged by Shoulders at the Round Up Club in Okmulgee and its purpose is to help recruit boys into Scouting.

Although he attended the rodeo as a spectator, Healey and some other fathers were "volunteered" into participating in a donkey race with some of the Cub Scouts.

"It sounded simple at first," Healey said. "The idea was to ride to the end of the arena on the donkeys." The announcer yelled "Ride 'em Cowboy," and Healey was given a quick course in donkey habits and anatomy.

"When the race started, everyone, including me, was thrown by the bucking donkeys, except one boy who lucked onto a tame donkey. A donkey has almost no withers, and when he sticks his head between his legs, there's no place to go except off."

Would he do it again? "If it helps Scouting, yes," Healey said, "but wild donkey riding for Den Masters is a part of Scouting that's hard to train for."
