

The new web site for the Northern Ontario Railroad Museum and Heritage Centre is up and running. Developed by Susan MacArthur as part of a 20 week project funded by Human Resources Development Canada, the site will give on-line visitors an interesting tour of the museum and its' resources. There are also links to other railroad museums and related sites. The NORMHC site has been designed to be clean and easy to read so that everyone is able to navigate through it easily and will be encouraged to visit the actual museum. Using a program called Adobe GoLive, Susan developed the new design so that it can be easily be updated by museum staff and volunteers. The new web address is northnontariorailroadmuseum.com. The site can also be reached through the NORMHC link at capreolonline. If you are still looking for something a little different for someone on your Christmas list, drop by the museum gift shop to see the variety of railway related items that would be perfect stocking stuffers, as well as a selection of books, videos, T-shirts and specialty items. Call the museum at 858-5050 to arrange a visit.
