Enrollment increase at 15 percent

Whidbey schools have come a long way in past decade

by Wallie Funk

When white settlers seriously began the "colonization" of Whidbey Island back in the mid-nineteenth century the lifestyle was pure frontier.

There were no supermarkets. Imagine! Access to the mainland was primitive, sometimes hazardous and quite unreliable. The closest thing to a fast-food "franchise" was a ripened apple plucked from a random tree.

There were no surfaced roads. As a matter of fact it was many years of backbending labor before there was anything that resembled a decent trail.

In today's land of split-level living, it's hard to believe that even less than 50 years ago there were no shopping centers, golf courses, surfaced highways, medical clinics and hospital facilities — all the so-called modern refinements.

What also was missing from the picture more than a century ago? Schools. The few children here in those less accommodating days were sent to academies elsewhere on Puget Sound, were taught the rudimentary three Rs at home by dedicated parents or they got no formal education at all.

As the population grew the civilizing facilities came. There was a proliferation of one-room schools, many of them in rural areas all but inaccessible to villages springing up on the island and bearing such names as Coupeville, Langley and Oak Harbor.

Coupeville was to become the county seat. With that designation it developed as the social, cultural, commercial, political and educational hub of the island. It boasted one of the finest academies in the Northwest and youngsters not only from Whidbey Island but from waypoints along the Sound enrolled there. It was of such quality as to be almost fashionable.

More people came as the decades passed — albeit the migration to Whidbey Island was slow — and school population increased. Whidbey was, in the truest sense of the word, rural. Farming and lumbering were chief "industries." Life was not always easy. Even slight fluctuations in the economy severely impacted island residents. As a result public facilities — most particularly schools — reflected the impoverished times in size, design and appurtenances which today are taken for granted.

Up and down the island school enrollments were small and graduating classes could have conducted that ritualistic rite of spring (graduation) in a telephone booth — had there been a telephone booth around.

Oak Harbor High School, for example, held its first classes in the fall of 1910 in the Byrne building — which later, and ironically, when considering the structure's name, was destroyed by fire. J. W. D. Butcher and a Mrs. Combs were the administration and faculty. Butcher was the principal as well as teacher of several subjects and Mrs. Combs was hired on a part time basis only.

In 1911 28 students moved into the community's new two-story wooden frame high school on a 10-acre campus now occupied by administrative buildings, Memorial field and bus and maintenance buildings which serve the entire system.

Today there are more busses (35) transporting students within the Oak Harbor district than there were students (28) when doors were thrown open at the "new" high school 69 years ago this fall.

Oak Harbor High School's first graduating class (1914) included one girl and five boys. There were some familiar family names in the roll call, including those of Clara DeVries, Peter Fakkema, Carl Izett, Ben Loers, Raymond Maylor

Candidates square off, meet again tomorrow night

by Dave Pinkham

"Putting the best foot forward" was the name of the game last Thursday night as Island County's four commissioner candidates spoke to an audience of over 100 people at a pre-election forum in Oak Harbor.

They will get another chance to voice their opinions and extoll their qualifications tomorrow (Tuesday) night at a second political forum, this time at the Coupeville Elementary School multipurpose room at 7 p.m.

This forum is being held at Coupeville so that it will be more convenient for citizens from all parts of the island, since it features a wider range of candidates. Not only the county commissioner hopefuls will appear, but also gubernatorial candidate Jim McDermott, U. S. Representative Al Swift, his opponent Neal Snider, and all the 10th District State House and Senate candidates.

John Spellman, McDermott's opponent, was invited but will not be able to attend.

The Thursday "Candidates' Night," sponsored by the Whidbey Island unit of the League of Women Voters at the high school Commons, opened the final leg of this fall's campaign season — in which the candidates strain to reach the tape at the finish line first.

On the calendar, the finish line is Nov. 4.

The program included not only speeches and question-and-answer periods by commissioner candidates, but also presentations of positions on the three ballot issues which will appear on the ballot.

These are the owner-builder amendment, the public transportation sales tax and a bond levy for an Oak Harbor swimming pool (and community center if enough money is left over).

The commissioners went first. They all spoke in Oak Harbor since voters from all parts of the county vote in all commissioner races — unlike the primary election.

Both incumbent Lou Romeo of Clinton and challenger Jack McPherson of Coupeville, candidates for Position 1, said they intend to implement the county's comprehensive plan as soon as possible, but McPherson made stronger statements about that need.

While Romeo said "it must be done as soon as possible, and due process must be followed," McPherson lamented the passage of 40 months since the adoption of the plan.

"It's still not implemented — if somebody isn't moving, we have to get them moving," said McPherson.

On the subject of hiring an executive assistant, Romeo said, "Granted, it's been a back burner, but after the election the commissioners should make a judgment on it."

McPherson said, "First of all, the commissioners should work full-time — then if they need help on a specific project, I lean toward contracting individually, rather than having an executive. It's too difficult for one person to work for three."

E. Duane Kemp and Glenn Macomber, both of Oak Harbor, candidates for Position 2, addressed the issue of charter government. Kemp said it is "not a reasonable issue on which to elect a county commissioner" since the people decide the question at the polls.

Macomber said the charter is a "vehicle, not an issue." He said the current form of county government is "badly outdated."

"Are we satisfied with it? I think it has served its purpose already and we need a new system."

Mistakes hurt Cougars in junior high game

Panthers prevail 8-0

by Steve Potter

At halftime of the football battle for the Junior High City Championship Thursday night, there was no score.

In fact, with the exception of a last-minute turnover by the North Whidbey Cougars, the first half consisted mainly of an exchange of punts, three by each team.

In the Oak Harbor Panther's lockerroom, coaches Larry Kupp, Tom Gerber and Jeff Stone asked their players what types of plays they thought would work against the stubborn Cougar defense.

The Panthers had not encountered any stubborn defenses in rolling to easy wins in each of their first three games and so the coaches wanted the players' opinion on what might work in the second half of this game.

"Our players told us that we should go straight at North Whidbey on our dive series," said head coach Kupp after the game.

So, upon receiving the second half kickoff, that's exactly what the Panthers did — they ran right at the Cougar defense.

The strategy worked to perfection as Oak Harbor drove the ball 62 yards in 13 plays for the game's only score as the Panthers beat the Cougars, 8-0.

On the Panther touchdown drive, 11 of the plays were runs and 10 of those were up the middle rushes.

The other rush was a pitchout to try and get around the corner against the Cougars.

Halfbacks Dave Blondin, Dom Piazza, Tom Chatfield and Quinton Blythe did a lot of the work on the drive as did the Panther offensive linemen who opened the holes for the runners.

The drive started with Blondin getting four yards and ended with Blondin going into the endzone from a yard out.

Other highlights of the point-producing drive included Blythe's 10-yard pickup on a pitchout and Piazza's 11-yard burst up the middle in a third-and-10 situation.

With the ball at the 18, Panther quarterback Scott Carpenter hit Andy Nelson over the middle for a gain of 14 yards and a first-and-goal at the 4.

Chatfield moved the ball down to the 1 on first down, from where Blondin got the call for six points.

On the conversion, Carpenter coolly hit a tightly-covered Nelson over the middle for two more points.

With Oak Harbor taking the lead, the North Whidbey coaching staff of Bruce Biddle, Frank Hunter and Jon Kellett began to take chances.

On its possession after the score, the Cougar coaches decided to go for a first down on a fourth-and-three at the Panther 36.

Trailing by eight points, the Cougars needed to keep the ball, but the Panther defense stopped Mike Jones for no gain on the big play.

On the Cougars' next possession early in the last period, they were hampered by penalties of which they had 10 in the game.

Probably, the biggest flag of the game came with the Cougars on their 45 and a fourth-and-two situation.

The Cougars went for the yardage and made it, but a procedure call against NWJH moved the ball back giving them a fourth-and-six which they did not make.

North Whidbey got the ball back one more time in the game and quarterback Ty Heiserman went to the air where he hit Alvin Valencia for 19 yards.

The next NWJH pass dropped incomplete and on the third play, Heiserman's pass was behind the intended receiver and was intercepted by Andy Nelson snuffing out the Cougars' final chance.

Oak Harbor increased its record to 4-0 on the season, while the Cougars fell to 1-3.

The Panthers play at home Thursday, Oct. 23 against Sedro Woolley at 3:30 p.m., while the Cougars travel to Anacortes the same day for a 6:30 p.m. game.

Thieves steal North end pumpkins

North Whidbey farmer Lee Auvil believes thieves took off with at least 150 of his largest pumpkins in three separate midnight raids last week.

Besides taking his pumpkins, Auvil said they also took several 100-plus pound giant squashes. He estimated the value of the stolen produce to be several hundred dollars.

Auvil suspects the thieves stole them for resale.

on taxes

Joan Houchen has forthrightly said "NO! No more new taxes!" Because she knows that with inflation eating away at family budgets and the livelihood of our senior citizens, we need tax relief, not more taxes.

Reports are in — state government is spending more money than it receives. The answer? Either cut waste and unnecessary programs or raise taxes.

Joan says NO to taxes. And YES to a careful cutting back within our means.

government spending

Joan Houchen has been fighting for us to finally slam the lid down on the ever-increasing size of government. And it's been a lonely fight against the big spenders and bureaucrats.

But Joan knows bigger government is not better government. It hurts and not helps the people in our communities with all of the senseless rules and regulations.

Joan supports a Constitutional Amendment to put a halt on the growth of government. It's our money that they are spending!

Let's keep Joan Houchen fighting for us!

a tough stand on prisons

Joan Houchen has been recognized as one of the leading voices in the state on the critical need for prison reform. She's been tough on prisons because she knows that prison reform is more than just a simple political issue — it's a time-bomb, ready to go off, threatening to tear our communities apart.

Joan has actively worked to acquire McNeil Island to relieve the ever-building pressure in our overcrowded prisons. The tragedy that occurred at Monroe several weeks ago is just the first explosion.

one special interest group — you and your family.

Regardless of the size of the problem of any person in our local area, Joan Houchen takes those problems head-on.

Because she believes that our legislators ought to fight for only one special interest group — you and your family.

Joan is always quietly working behind the scenes, getting the job done for all of us. She's no headline grabber. Because Joan Houchen puts people over politics. We can be proud of Representative Joan Houchen.

The World Outside

by Don Woodcock

Bits and Pieces

The world outside is a busy world, tramped down and running over with adventure. There's triumph, and tragedy, and humor, and pathos — bits and pieces of life — everywhere.

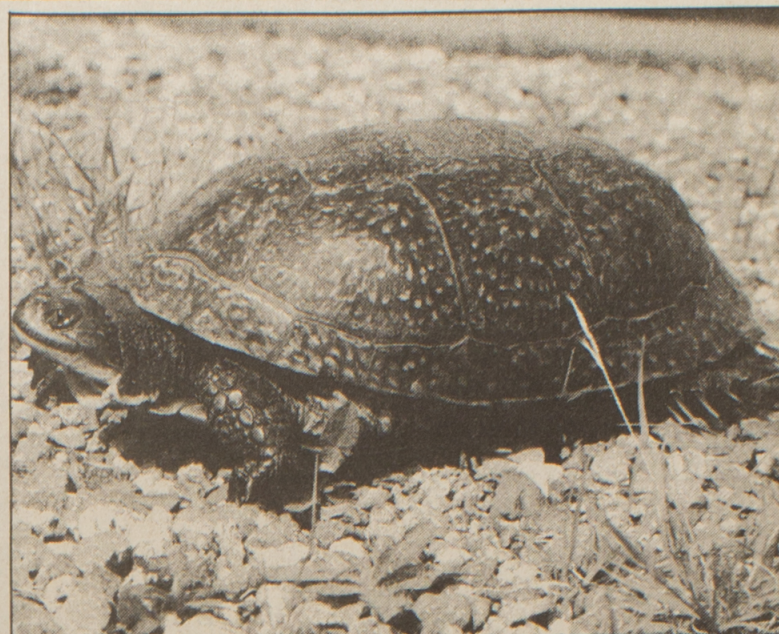

Some of these happenings, the more obvious ones, I see. The interesting and exciting ones I tell about in this column. But every day I see little things that snap my head around and drag me to my knees to watch and to wonder. That world out there utterly fascinates me with its variety and complexity and beauty.

Kneeling, eyes riveted on a spider with babies, I often have to stifle the urge to yell at the world, "Hey, come and look at this. Look how these babies can run."

Or another time, "Wow! You should see the color inside this flower. It's like royal velvet in there."

The trouble is most of these little episodes are too fragile and fleeting to justify a column so they go unreported and that's a shame. So, here are some bits and pieces, little happenings from the world outside.

Picture a turtle crossing a timber bridge. She's moving very slowly and deliberately. She's nervous about the empty spaces between the timbers and she is walking on tiptoes. That's right, tiptoe. Each foot is lifted high and carefully moved along and then lowered and placed on the next plank. The process is hilarious to me but deadly serious to Ma turtle.

I'm sitting under a maple, daydreaming. Suddenly, my eyes focus on a dry twig which has moved, and thus revealed itself to be a moth. The moth's head is big and blunt, and she has closed her wings and curled them about her to resemble a broken twig. I touch her and the wings unfold into a beautiful beige, chocolate and sand mosaic.

I see a flicker of movement ahead on the trail. Instantly, I drop to the ground, edge up the slope and peek over — into the eyes of a coyote pup. He's caught off guard. He hesitates, turns back, changes his mind and sprints back across the trail with a little whimper.

A kingfisher scolds me as I slouch against a bridge rail. I lean over and look down. The mate is perched six feet away, watching me. She squawks, and with each squawk the tail wags and the crest unfurls like a dancer's fan. For the first time I become aware of the size and strength of a kingfisher's beak.

Belly down in a meadow, nose to nose with 'Butter-and-Eggs' in bloom, I'm ignored by a bee, leg baskets heavy with pollen, as it prods and pokes the blossoms.

Little things. Bits and pieces. Parts of an incredible whole. The world outside.

(Editor's note: Don Woodcock is a writer-photographer whose love for the great outdoors transformed itself into a weekly column 10 years ago while he was still in the Canadian Royal Air Force. After his military retirement, Woodcock and his wife, Kareen, found a suitable building site for their solar home on Whidbey Island. Since the building project is nearly completed, Woodcock decided to get back to writing about the outdoors. His writing and photos will be regular features of Whidbey Today. # Forum tells how to heat safely with wood

by Cathy Dillon

Homeowners can heat safely with wood stoves, but they must follow proper installation and maintenance procedures to assure their home and family members won't become one of the growing statistics of those destroyed by fire.

Cal Pethers, information officer for the Spokane Fire Department, told a large Oak Harbor crowd Thursday that the approach of some fire officials has been to "sort of scare you into not burning with wood."

"I use wood to heat my home," Pethers told the audience gathered for a wood stove forum at the Whidbey Federal Credit Union. "It's the best source of heat I can find."

However, home heating is now the number one cause of fire and has replaced arson as the number one residential dollar loss in the United States, he cautioned.

With today's increasing fuel costs, more and more homeowners are returning to free-standing wood stoves and fireplaces to heat their homes, he said.

"The rebirth of wood means we have to learn how to use them all over again," he said.

It also calls for educating young children about the possible harmful effects. Last year over 200 Spokane children were hospitalized with burns from wood stoves, he said.

"You need to teach your children about the stove," he said. "They don't understand why it's cold one time and intensely hot at another time."

Also in Spokane, the incidents of residential fires caused by wood stoves jumped from 25 percent in 1975 to 74 percent in 1979. However, Pethers claimed that 74 percent of the wood stoves in his city were installed improperly.

"Heating your home with a wood stove can be done safely and properly, but there are just a few things you have to realize before you get involved," he said.

One of these is the importance of having a city official inspect the stove installation. A question Pethers said he is almost always asked when he makes his wood stove presentations in communities around the state is if a building permit is really necessary.

"I don't care about the fee or the bureaucratic mish-mash," Pethers said. "But the good thing about it is a competent person comes out to look at the installation — not your neighbor or your brother-in-law — but someone who looks at installations everyday."

The building inspector also signs his name to a document stating the homeowner's wood stove is safely installed. This becomes a public record stored in city hall which may be essential for any insurance loss claim the homeowner makes at a future date, he said.

"The first place the insurance agent goes is to city hall," Pether said. "If it's not there, stand by for a reduced claim. You'll never have a problem if it's on file."

Even though stoves have been tested in a nationally recognized laboratory, local regulations may vary and therefore the building inspector must tell people if their stoves meet the local safety standards.

He also offered some purchasing and installation tips, starting off by suggesting consumers buy a wood stove that has been tested by a nationally recognized testing laboratory, such as the International Conference of Building Officials (ICBO) and Underwriters Laboratories (UL).

If a stove has undergone this test, a sticker with these initials will be affixed to the back of the unit, he said.

Once the homeowner buys a stove and brings it home, there are a few things to keep in mind when installing the unit.

Pethers recommended that homeowners never multiple vent their fireplace stove by installing it onto the same chimney flue as their oil or gas furnace. When two or more air inlets are hooked up to the same flue, there is increased danger of uncontrollable chimney fires, he explained.

Multiple venting creates turbulence and lowers the efficiency of both the wood stove, as well as the oil or gas furnace, he said.

Wood stoves produce an accumulation of creosote and multiple venting can cause a blockage of this dark substance. This, in turn, can result in carbon monoxide and other toxic products of combustion backing up and flowing into the residence, he said.

In these situations sleeping family members have been afflicted with carbon monoxide poisoning, sometimes never to wake up, Pethers said.

One way to help reduce creosote build-up is to apply a stove pipe thermometer, he said. It is designed to help you set your draft controls so you are conserving heat up the flue, yet obtaining the proper air fuel mixture to reduce air pollution and creosote accumulation in your chimney, he said.

An ideal stove pipe temperature for overnight burning that will retain sufficient heat to burn off some of the creosote is 300 degrees Fahrenheit, Pethers said.

If homeowners are tapping their wood stoves into a chimney, he recommended they have a chimney sweep look at it. And it should be cleaned when there is more than one quarter inch build-up of creosote.

"It's so important to have your chimney cleaned, evaluated and looked over for unbreached openings," he said. "If your chimney is unlined, have it lined."

When you install your stove, it should be placed at least 36 inches away from combustible materials, unless a reduced clearance is specified by the listing on your appliance, he said.

Lt. Cal Pethers of the Spokane Fire Dept. answers an Oak Harbor man's questions about wood stoves.

"A common error people make is to reduce the clearance distance by placing a brick wall or asbestos sheet against the combustible wall, thinking that they'll have now have adequate protection," Pethers said.

"But everything absorbs heat — even stone, brick metal and asbestos," he warned. "Any wood, drapes, or furniture adjacent could ignite."

The absence of any immediate problems may be deceptive. Many fires caused by improper clearances do not break out until three to five years after the installation, he said.

Pethers advised the audience attending the forum sponsored by the City of Oak Harbor and Terry Steele to arm themselves with as much knowledge about safely installing and managing wood stoves.

"Product-related problems are almost uncommon," he said. "It's like trying to blame an accident on your vehicle."

He told them, too, that saving a few pennies by cutting corners is just not worth it.

"You spend your whole lives working for your home and family," Pethers said. "A fire is the last thing you want to see happen. You may cut a dollar, but you'll end up paying for it for the rest of your life."

Over The Back Fence

By Dorothy Neil

What would one do without the lowly potato? Homely, sleep-eyed little muffin, brown skinned, submissive, and mealy-mouthed, but with a quiescent potential that is spectacular!

Frances Davis Hayton of Mount Vernon, in "Pioneer Women," relates a story of her mother, Margaret Hastie Davis, born on Whidbey Island in 1870 on the Freund farm in Oak Harbor. The young Margaret and her sister had the job each spring of keeping sprouts off the potatoes stored in the root cellar.

The stored potatoes had to last until the new potatoes were ready to dig in the summer garden, and the children had to go through the supply so as to keep the important part of the family's diet edible. Margaret said she never forgot the odor of the root cellar, as she disliked it, but her daughter said that to her last days her mother daily ate a baked potato smothered in butter!

There is nothing to describe the aroma (or smell) of the old fashioned root cellar that was the forerunner of the refrigerator.

Here root vegetables were stored, cabbages and onions hung from rafters along with smoked meats, and winter apples gave the place an aroma that no perfumer has been able to duplicate. Many cellars had a shelf for pans of milk, especially in the summer.

The root cellar was a hole dug in the ground, perhaps three feet deep, with a sod and dirt roof built the same height from the ground level. The door, built on a slant led down several steps, and inside in the winter and summer the cellar was damp and cool.

Potatoes have played important roles in world history. In the mid-1880's the "potatoe famine" in Ireland and Scotland sent thousands to the new worlds of North and South America and to Australia. While many thousands died with the potatoes in the affected countries, the new world was enriched by the transplanted Irish and Scots.

Potato Puff

This is a variation of the Dutch "hutspot" or the Irish "colcannon" using mashed potatoes as a base and adding cooked vegetables and bits of cooked meats, ham, beef, port. One may use cabbage or sauerkraut, onion, carrots and celery beaten into the potatoes.

2 cups mashed potatoes
2 tbs. grated Parmesan cheese
1 tbs. melted butter
2 tbs. chopped onion
3 eggs, separated.

Combine the potatoes and cheese, add butter and onion. Beat egg yolks and add. Beat whites until stiff, fold into mixture and turn into a deep, buttered 2-quart casserole. Bake 30 minutes in a 350 oven or until a knife inserted in center comes out clean. Serves 4-6. Cost about 70 cents (potatoes at 49 cents lb.).

Potatoes may become the main dish for a meatless meal with the following recipe.

Cheese Potatoes

6 medium potatoes, cooked in skins
1 cup Cheddar cheese, shredded
6 tbs. butter
three quarters cup sour cream
3 green onions, chopped
1 tsp. salt, pepper

Peel and crumble the peeled potatoes. Heat butter and cheese in saucepan until cheese is almost melted, remove from heat and blend in sour cream, onions, salt and pepper. Fold in potatoes. Spoon into greased 2-qt. casserole dish. Dot with 2 tbs. butter, cover and bake 25 minutes. Larrapin' good!

Indoor air pollution

Persons concerned about airborne health hazards in the home can contact the Washington Lung Association for information on protecting their lungs. "Air Pollutants in Your Home", a new brochure prepared by the Washington Lung Association, is available free of charge.

"Indoor air pollution may pose a more serious health problem than originally believed, especially considering the fact that we spend up to 80 percent of our time indoors," said Janet Chalupnik, director of environmental health programs for the Lung Association.

The recent drive to insulate and tighten up homes may be trapping polluted air, increasing the risk of various diseases, said Mrs. Chalupnik. Other pollutants and their sources covered in the pamphlet include formaldehyde, asbestos, dust, tobacco smoke, and cleaning agents.

For more information write the Lung Association at 216 Broadway East, Seattle, Wash. 98102, or call 322-7110.

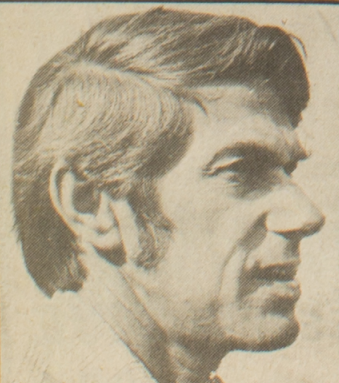

The Lung Association is a private, nonprofit, voluntary health agency working to prevent and control all lung diseases in Washington State.

The organization's main source of funding is the annual Christmas Seals (R) Campaign.

LOCAL CONTROL

Government works best when decisions are made at the closest level to the people. As your State Senator, I will (1) try to return power from the state to your local school district and to local county government; make county government more effective and responsive; and (2) curb federal power over state and local government. The federal government can't run our affairs as well as we can run them ourselves!

Your State Senator must understand the proper balance between the levels of government, must know what the state can do to resist the federal government, and must have the courage to speak out — to fight when necessary.

Haunted house at So. Whidbey

The American Legion, Auxiliary and S.A.L. of Post No. 141 South Whidbey has planned a Halloween event for October 31.

That evening from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. children of pre-school to junior high ages are invited to be Tricked and Treated, Scared and Thrilled in the American Legion Haunted House which will be located on the bottom floor of the post.

There will be scares aplenty, refreshments and treats for all, prizes for the best costumes, with a movie to follow.

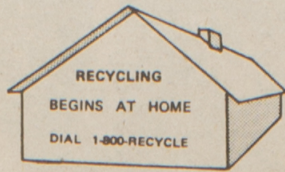

Here are a couple of safety tips to follow on Halloween.

If children wear Halloween costumes, parents should see that these garments are flame resistant. If the costumes treated with flame-resistant material are washed or cleaned, they lose their fire-resistant properties. The costumes should be treated after cleaning or discarded when dirty.

Children have difficulty seeing when they wear Halloween masks because of the small slits for the eyes. Cosmetics or stage makeup can be used rather than a mask.

Motorists, please use extreme caution that evening.

With these few tips in mind it should be a fun and safe evening for everyone. Come join in our Halloween event.

Whidbey schools show growth . . .

and Henry Muyskens.
The school's Class of 1915 included one lone member — Irene Johnson. This year (1981) record numbers will receive diplomas from the island's three high schools in Langley (129), Coupeville (60) and Oak Harbor (407). All are estimated based on enrollment as of Oct. 1, 1980.

Growth is key to developments in Whidbey Island schools the past decade. While Oak Harbor had recorded the biggest gain since the location of the Naval Air Station here in 1941 (from less than 200) to more than 5,600 at its peak in 1976-77, Langley is the pace setter of the last 10 years.

Since 1970-71 with a total enrollment of 985 in all grades, it has charted a 47 percent increase to 1,444 through Sept. 30, 1980. As a result voters approved funding for a new high school which will be in operation next fall.

While enrollment and percentage increases are smaller at Coupeville that district has also scored substantial enrollment gains the past decade. From 573 on the final day of the 1970-71 school year, the Coupeville system is at 725 Oct. 1, 1980. It represents 26.1 percent growth in 10 years.

It has resulted in new buildings, renovation and expansion of existing facilities to accommodate the increases. More than $3,000,000 in new construction was completed in the Coupeville district last year, including remodeling of the high school, the addition of a new wing, a gymnasium, more classrooms for the grade school and administrative offices.

Oak Harbor has experienced the only decline in enrollment, but it is considered to be temporary as adjustments caused by the departure of two squadrons are made. From a high of 5612 in 1976-77 to a low of 5363 last spring. It represents a loss of 249 students through the 1979-80 school year.

Oct. 1, 1980 the recovery had begun with the pupil count at 5373 and the forecast of continued growth through the 1984-85 term.

What investment in facilities does this all represent? In Oak Harbor $18,475,173. In Langley, $6,917,581 and Coupeville $5,400,000 on most current assessments available. The total for the island rounds out at $30,792,700 for all three districts.

Busing has come a long way since Oak Harbor students of another generation were transported from rural areas by horse-drawn wagon some 50 years ago.

Today the same school system (Oak Harbor) uses 35 buses to carry 3600 students a total of 2300 miles a day. In Coupeville nine buses average 12,000 miles per school year, including transportation for athletics and field trips. At Langley 20 buses travel over 18,000 miles per month delivering students to class and home again.

All schools report a substantial drop the past two years (as a result of rising fuel costs) in extracurricular travel.

The conclusion from all this is that Whidbey schools have come a long way since the early days when the island was a lightly-populated emerald gem at the entrance to Puget Sound.

Oak Harbor, for example, has come a long, long way from the days of Mr. Butcher and Ms. Comb to its 292 person faculty, 17 administrators and 108 classified employees. At Coupeville the faculty includes 36 teachers, three administrators and 35 non-certificated personnel, many of the latter (custodians, bus drivers, cafeteria help, secretaries and teachers aides) working part time.

In Langley there are 60 teachers, four administrators and 57 classifieds are employed by the district.

In total there are 388 teachers. 24 administrators and 200 classifieds on the Whidbey payroll, making schools one of the foremost employers both in their respective communities and for the island.

Enrollment in the three districts through Oct. 1, 1980 is at 7,542, up from 6,558 in 1970-71, a 15 percent increase. The combined "census" exceeds the population of the entire island (as well as county) a half a century ago.

Schooling is not only a monumental undertaking it is now one of the island's biggest "businesses" with its annual three-district budget of $17,221,301.

Indeed, Whidbey Island has come a long way in meeting the obligation of a public education for its young.

Teenager awaits sentencing

A 15-year-old Langley boy pleaded guilty Friday in Island County Juvenile Court to two counts of burglary and a malicious mischief charge, stemming from two incidents at Goss Lake in June, and a November incident on Saratoga Road.

James Joseph Mack, 3909 S. Forest Glenn Drive, told Judge Richard L. Pitt he entered Bud Hoelscher's Saratoga Road home last November, and took some things that did not belong to him, and that he also entered and removed items from Al Smith's South Lakeside Drive house, at Goss Lake, in June. And on June 26, he intentionally broke a bathroom window at Marilyn Abrahamson's Goss Lake home, he said.

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney H. Clarke Harvey said other juveniles were involved with Mack in all three incidents.

Wine and a tape recorder were stolen from Hoelscher's house, and whiskey, beer, and cigarettes from Smith's house, said Harvey.

The standard sentence for each count of second-degree burglary is 20 to 30 days detention, community service for 100 to 150 hours, a $100 fine, and a year's community supervision. For third-degree malicious mischief, the standard sentence is 20 to 35 hours service, three months supervision, and $25.

Harvey recommended Mack be committed to juvenile rehabilitation for 40 to 60 days, and pay restitution to the victims.

Judge Pitt granted defense attorney Doug Kelly's request that a report on Mack be prepared by juvenile probation officers before he is sentenced.

Coupeville sets growth moratorium

The Coupeville Town Council last week held out a divining rod in the form of a motion to place a one-year water rights moratorium while steps are taken to find additional water to boost a barely adequate supply.

The council, in a four to one vote, placed a one-year moratorium on providing water rights out of town or to any new subdivision within town limits.

According to a Seattle-based engineering company report, the town has barely enough water to meet peak day demands and is not able to provide full "fire flow" protection in case of an emergency.

The council also mapped out a course of action to find additional wells and storage.

The council had commissioned R. W. Beck and Associates, a Seattle engineering firm, to outline different plans for supplying more water to the town. Beck responded with scenarios on different water sources the town could tap, including finding new wells and building a reservoir or tying in with the Anacortes water system that now supplies Oak Harbor.

The council is opting for another nearby reservoir to be built west of town off Broadway, possibly fed by water from existing wells in the vicinity.

Councilman John Shanafelt, spokesman of the town's water policy committee, said that location would provide the maximum water flow and it would be far enough away from the town it would not be a "visual blight."

Beck engineers Erich O. Tietze and Scott Gibb had pointed out to the council that a reservoir to the west of town would provide two routes of flow into town, making the system more reliable in case of fire.

The engineers also said a reservoir lacks aesthetic qualities which might not make it a suitable facility within town limits, where the water treatment plant was considered by Beck as one of the possible reservoir sites.

Beck was asked by the council last week to develop a water plan that would include full pressure and supply to meet the town's firefighting needs.

Fire flow protection is considered the ability to pump 4,800 gallons a minute with four hours of storage, according to Tietze.

The search for adequate existing wells is another project to be undertaken by the town and its water policy committee.

A comprehensive plan also is slated and Shanafelt suggested it include consideration of the water needs of not just Coupeville but all of Central Whidbey. The council has not, however, endorsed Coupeville as a purveyor of water for Central Whidbey.

Charles Scott, the town's financial advisor, was directed by the council to determine Coupeville's bonding capacity to finance the measure.

Costs for the expansion have not been pinpointed, however, Tietze had estimated for the council earlier that a reservoir west of town with additional water pipes into Coupeville would cost about $1.6 million in general improvements to those on the water system. Additionally, about $1.116 million in local improvement districts would be required, he said.

Expanding to a reservoir and wells with the water being treated would increase costs to customer $1 a month. That cost would increase to an additional $8 a month by 1988, with inflation not figured into that increase.

Expanding to a system that does not require treatment would increase monthly costs by $1 initially and up to $2 by 1988.

Self-help winterization program offered

High heat bills? Cold air coming in around doors and windows?

You may be eligible for "weatherization" of your home this winter. Through a Dept. of Energy grant, the Opportunity Council of Bellingham provides free labor and materials to financially eligible applicants, with a special emphasis on senior citizens. Renters also are eligible.

Work performed includes caulking and repairing of broken windows, insulation, weather stripping, pipe and duct wrap, storm windows and doors. There is no charge for the service.

Under the "self help" program, able-bodied applicants can install the materials, with technical advice from the weatherization crew. The program also has tools to loan on the "self-help" option.

Seniors van purchase delayed

After two calls for bids failed to provide chairlift-equipped vans the county can afford, the Island County Commissioners decided last Thursday to wait until the state buys some, and they'll try to get a bargain from the Department of Transportation.

"Possibly the chairlift scared them away," said county Parks Director Bill DiPrete of the several dealers he had invited to bid on two vans the county needs for its senior citizen transportation program.

"We only received one bid the second time around, and it came in too high," he said.

The commissioners rejected Brian

Motors' $29,717 bid because it was over the budgeted amount.

"Do you think that van on Camano Island is going to hold?" Commissioner R. W. "Bob" Christiansen asked DiPrete.

"We're going to have to make it hold," said DiPrete.

He suggested that the commissioners buy the two vehicles from the state through its marketing contract, and they directed him to arrange the purchase with the Department of Transportation.

"We may not get the vans until December, but that's the quickest way of getting the vehicles on the road," said DiPrete.

Suspect arrested in motel burglary

Monday, October 20, 1980

Whidbey Today, Oak Harbor, Washington

Oak Harbor Police arrested a local man for suspicion of burglary shortly after a motel owner reported surprising a man in the act of rummaging through the motel reception desk last Wednesday at midnight, a police spokesman said.

Michael Anthony Baldwin, 22, was arrested in his Town View Apartment residence, after the motel owner furnished a physical description of the intruder fitting his description, according to police sergeant Pete Gaalema.

He was held in the city jail for one day and released.

Baldwin is also being investigated in connection with 11 incidents of tire puncturing and the alleged theft of $80 from a Queen Anne Motel room, Gaalema said.

The manager of the Acorn Motor Inn called police that night at midnight, reporting he and a motel guest had surprised a man as he was rummaging through desk drawers behind the reception counter, he said.

The manager had been asleep in an adjacent room when he heard noises he first believed came from the ice machine in the motel lobby. He went to investigate, and turned a corner just as a guest from an upstairs room descended the stairs, Gaalema said.

The two men then simultaneously confronted the intruder, who reportedly said he was looking for the name of a guest who might be registered there. But when the manager said he was going to call police, the man fled, Gaalema said.

The suspect reportedly left a small pocket knife at the scene, he added.

When the motel manager called police, he furnished them with a description of the suspect as a Black male in his early to mid 20's.

Shortly before the incident occurred, one of the patrolman reported having seen a man fitting that description jogging between Safeway and the Dutch Maid Laundry in the direction of Acorn Motor Inn, Gaalema said.

The officer recognized the man he had seen and stopped at his Town View apartment shortly after the reported motel incident, he said.

There Baldwin was interviewed, arrested for two counts of second-degree burglary and taken into custody for further investigation. He is being investigated for possible involvement in connection with a series of other incidents which took place that night, Gaalema said.

At 2 a.m. the bartender at the King's Table reported that after securing the bar, he went to get his car in the parking lot. He said he found his tire punctured and a small pen knife inserted in the sidewall, Gaalema said.

Another vehicle with a punctured tire was later discovered at the Safeway parking lot. It reportedly belonged to the night stock man.

The arrested suspect is also under investigation for possible involvement in the theft of $80 from a Queen Anne Motel room that was reported Wednesday morning, Gaalema said.

The day after Baldwin's arrest police received a report that a Panasonic radio cassette player valued at $200 had been taken early that morning or the night before from an apartment at the Town View Apartments, he said.

When police arrested Baldwin in his apartment, they saw a Panasonic radio cassette player similar in appearance to the one reported missing, Gaalema said.

They subsequently obtained a search warrant for the apartment and seized the radio as evidence, he said.

Liquor license transfer denied

Citing hassles police have had at the Deception Pass Saloon, Sheriff Dick Medina convinced the Island County Commissioners Thursday that they shouldn't approve the transfer of a liquor license to the tavern's new management.

The commissioners denied a transfer of the liquor license from tavern owner James L. Seabolt to Degro, Inc.

Seabolt said plans were for Degro corporate officers Sanley and Josefa Groszek and Richard DeGoulier to take over the business.

Medina said there had never been any trouble with Seabolt's compliance with liquor license laws, but he told the commissioners that DeGoulier had been cited for driving while intoxicated late one night as he was leaving the saloon. Medina said DeGoulier admitted to a state patrolman that he had been drinking beer while checking identification cards at the saloon.

When his deputies were making a routine check at the Deception Pass Saloon, 4946 North State Highway 20, DeGoulier and bartender Jo Groszek "questioned the deputies authority and asked that the deputies not come back through the tavern because it bothered patrons."

And last month deputies arrested a 19-year-old man at the tavern and cited him for illegal consumption. They also cited the bartender for serving liquor to a minor.

"The bartender admitted to having served the minor without requiring any I.D.," said the sheriff.

Camano rec center to get major landscaping

A Bellingham nursery got a $97,224 work order from Island County last week to landscape the county's recreation center on Camano Island.

The Island County Commissioners accepted DeWilde's Nursery's bid last Thursday for landscaping work to include the Camano center's tennis courts, multipurpose field, irrigation system, and parking area.

The Bellingham nursery's proposal was the lowest of four bids the county received, and the commissioners rejected three bids ranging from $97,151 to $105,700.

County Parks Director Bill DiPrete said the amount falls within the county's budget. He and the county Park and Recreation Board recommended acceptance of the DeWilde contract.

The county's share of the cost is $33,000, an amount the county commissioners approved this summer.

The rest of the tab will be paid with federal Land and Water Conservation Act funds, said DiPrete.

Hugh Brainard: 'meat and potatoes cook'

Hugh Brainard preparing a dish.

by Dorothy Neil
A retired Navy Lieutenant Commander whose home overlooks the waters of the Straits of Juan de Fuca, within sight and sound of the Naval Air Station's planes and 'copters, has cooking as one of his lifetime hobbies.

Hugh Brainard's retirement after "30 years, two months and two days" was accomplished with a sense of regret. He "loved Navy life and was not in a hurry to get out." Retirement came in 1971, just ten years after the Brainard family came to Whidbey to live.

The four children of Hugh and Lee Brainard all finished school in Oak Harbor, and the two youngest went through all 12 grades. With Lee a "working mother" (she has been Editor of the Crosswind, NAS newspaper for the past nine years and before that was employed at Whidbey Press) the couple regard Oak Harbor as "home."

Hugh traced his chef's talents back to when he and Lee were first married. "We learned to cook together," he said. And with Navy duty all over the world, he had plenty of time to investigate various foods and their preparation.

One of his favorites is Chinese food, "maybe because I can't cook it," he admitted. He pointed out that the Chinese cook over high heat and quickly so that the vegetables are not overdone.

Brainard also admits to being a "meat and potatoes" cook, with his specialties beef or pork roasts, "pot-roast" type.

To cook a roast he covers it all over with prepared mustard, then flour, and browns it before placing it in a covered casserole or roaster for all-day cooking. Vegetables such as onion, potatoes, carrot and cabbage may be placed in with the meat for the last hour of cooking.

"Slow cooked meat does not lose moisture, and is hard to ruin, and is tender," he said, ignoring the rare-meat fans. The above method allows people who work during the day to start dinner in the morning and forget it, to return to a toothsome meal.

In a "quick dish" which takes only seven minutes to prepare Brainard uses one of the prepared macaroni-and-cheese packages according to instructions. He then browns a pound of ground beef mixed with chopped celery, bell pepper, onion and one-third package of spaghetti seasoning, and places this on top of the macaroni. Voila! A well-rounded quick meal that everyone likes!

With the Navy, the Brainards were stationed in various places about the world, and travelled from their duty stations to many other countries.

They enjoyed especially the two years they spent in England. Of all the "other countries" they visited Brainard's favorite was Ireland. In 1980, ten years after his retirement and 25 years later, he and Lee revisited the land of the shamrock.

"I can still taste their asparagus soup and the Irish cream," he said wistfully.

He remembered their first visit to Ireland when they had "one of the best meals we ever enjoyed."

"The store had just closed, but we knocked on the door and they saw we were visitors. They took us home with them and cooked supper for the six of us 'from scratch'... meat and potatoes! They had never seen us before! That's hospitality!"

Nowhere were they treated as well as in Ireland, he said. Irish cooking is very simple, and well-done, "meat and potatoes" meals.

Brainard's cooking skills get a work-out when "the kids and their kids" come home, or when there are visitors over the weekend.

Hugh and Lee have always shared household responsibilities, because Lee "worked off and on" during the years the children were growing up.

"Back when $96 a month was the base pay, we decided a second income would be most welcome, thinking not only of present needs but education for the kids," she said. They share responsibility in working, in cooking and household chores, a good example of partnership.

Which has produced a most enjoyable "hobby" for Hugh Brainard, and many most enjoyable meals for the family and for their friends.

South end woman sentenced for forgery and theft

A South Whidbey woman, saying she was out of work and feared rejection from social service programs, was found guilty earlier this month in Island County Superior Court for forging two checks and borrowing the truck of a Freeland couple who were renting their house to her while on a European vacation.

Patricia Juanita Mendoza was sentenced to 90 days in the Island County jail on a two-year deferred sentence and was ordered to pay restitution as well as court and attorney fees by Superior Court Judge Richard Pitt.

The 27-year-old woman had been renting the Freeland home of Erin and Walter Ruthensteiner, who had been in Austria since earlier this year.

While they were gone, Mendoza reportedly cashed at least two checks belonging to the couple. She also was sentenced in court on taking a motor vehicle without the owner's permission Mendoza said she had used the couple's truck, damaging the hood when trying to start it.

The amount of damages to the truck and the amount of money from the forged checks is to be determined.

The early July incidents were discovered by the Island County Sheriff's office after Erin Ruthensteiner contacted deputies and told them she had received four cancelled checks which she had stored in a locked room during her absence.

A deputy went to the Freeland home, found no one home but noticed the truck missing. He returned later with a search warrant.

In sentencing the woman, Judge Pitt said, "This is not the first occasion in which you elected to use other people's checks." Island County Prosecutor David Jamieson earlier had told the court Mendoza has a prior conviction on second-degree forgery and theft in King County where she reportedly took checks from her room mate.

Letter to the editor

Don't be mislead, says owner-builder proponent

Dear Editor:

A main political theme of candidates for office on all levels this year is reduced government control. Whether or not successful state and federal office seekers will actually reduce the stranglehold of government control is open to speculation.

In an effort to achieve a "more perfect" government, our legislators have infringed dramatically upon the lives of the American people. Our free enterprise system has been taxed and regulated to the point of questioned existence — especially at the small business level. Our inflated economy has virtually all of us living an economically diminished life-style.

In still other areas of government control, constitutionally guaranteed personal freedoms are being compromised or denied by existing legislation and other personal rights are in jeopardy from proposed controls. Granted, legislation that insures the security and safety of the public is mandated by our society — but certainly not all controls are applicable in all situations, nor were they ever intended to be.

On November 4th we, the voters in Island County, will have a rare opportunity to advise our County Commissioners to help reduce some state imposed regulations that threaten the personal freedom of expression and private property rights of a number of Island County residents.

The Uniform Building Code and Related Standards, published by the International Conference of Building Officials has been adopted by relatively few states — Washington among them. The Uniform Building Code (UBC) was written to regulate building in urban areas. Many sections of the UBC that are appropriate in Los Angeles, Chicago, or Seattle are simply not appropriate in the rural areas of Island County.

A provision of the UBC allows local government — in this case our commissioners — to amend the code so as to be compatible with local needs. The proposed Building Code Amendment, on the Nov. ballot, is a practical and reasonable approach to providing relief from some of the restrictive and unnecessary provisions of the UBC.

Proponents of the Building Code Amendment are not advocating total abandonment and disregard of the UBC. Critical and important regulations concerning structural integrity; fire safety, including firestopping, warning devices, stove and chimney installations; and provisions for inspections are included in the amendment. All regulations involving electrical and plumbing applications remain unchanged from the UBC and must be complied with. Health regulations too, remain unchanged under the proposed amendment.

Don't be misled by the "tar-paper shack" mentality of the vocal opponents to this amendment. Contrary to what these self-interest groups would have us believe, the proposed Building Code Amendment is a carefully thought-out, painstakingly authored document that has involved over three years of consultation and compromise with building officials, legal representatives, contractors, and design engineers. It provides a safe, sane, and reasonable alternative for the rural property owner wishing to construct his/her own home — in some cases this involves using materials that the land provides, an idea that spans more than 200 years of rural American heritage.

Though residents of incorporated areas such as Oak Harbor, Coupeville, and Langley will be voting on this issue, the amendment does not apply to buildings within these areas. But whether you are a rural resident or a resident of an incorporated area, your yes vote for the Building Code Amendment is a vote for personal freedom and reduced government imposition and that is an issue that is of vital concern to all of us.

If you have questions concerning the amendment or if you're undecided as to its advisability, you can easily assure yourself of the practical and reasonable nature of this important issue by examining a copy of the amendment. They are available at your local library, the County courthouse, newspaper offices, or by calling 221-7993 or 221-2166.

50 YEARS
A WORLD OF FRESHNESS AT YOUR FINGERTIPS

Frozen foods have come a long way since their discovery 50 years ago by Clarence A. Birdseye. Today, you'll find frozen foods for every meal and every taste in our frozen food case.

You'll also find big savings all week long as we celebrate frozen foods' golden anniversary.

Make frozen foods a part of your weekly menu. They're not only great time and budget savers, but real flavor-pleasers, too!
