On trail of discovery, students stage Lewis & Clark musical to raise funds this weekend

Students of Central Whidbey's Arts and Learning Connections and Home Connections are raising money for the trip they plan with teacher Liz Sherman to follow the Lewis and Clark route this summer.

They're staging a musical production "The Adventures of Lewis and Clark," Memorial weekend in the Coupeville Performing Arts Center.

Tickets are $6, seating is open and performances are at 7 p.m. Saturday, and on Sunday, at 2 p.m. and 6 p.m.

The production is presented under the auspices of Concerts on the Cove.

Choreography is by Cilla Whatcott.

The Captain Clapp House

Sometimes we do not choose our homes so much as they appear to choose us. This seems especially to be true when an old house is a little rumpsprung with use and someone comes along both willing and able to restore it to its original beauty.

In 1969, Ronald VanDyk and his mother Ethel were being entertained in the Captain Clapp House when its owner announced he intended to sell the property and suggested the VanDyks buy it. There just happened to be a banker in the house at the time who volunteered that a loan would certainly be possible for such an excellent purchase. "We were set up," laughed Ron. "And we bought it."

In 1886, Captain Joseph Clapp married Miss Mary (Molly) Cranney and purchased the house, built that same year. One of the original captains in this City of Sea Captains, Clapp gained his land legs and entered public office, serving as postmaster, Island County Clerk, Justice of the Peace and deputy county treasurer. His wife Mollie is remembered as a lovely woman who enjoyed the company of friends and family while her husband has been described as "a charming and witty man." They resided in the Queen Anne residence for more than 50 years. In the 1920's, when the staircase to the second floor grew too steep for the Clapps' venerable legs, they added a one-story bedroom to the west facade, removing a section of the verandah.

Three sets of owners then lived in the house until the fateful evening when the VanDyks took up the challenge of restoring it. And, as is so often the case, there was plenty to restore. Linoleum needed to be given the heave-ho, pink walls repainted, period details replaced and the foundation repaired. Ron, a skilled handyman, has done the work himself, finding architectural elements like stained glass windows and antique panelling as he pursued his "day job" as a telephone repairman. He has found beveled glass door panels dumped by the roadside and a Victorian chandelier being used as a hanging plant pot.

The loss of the beautiful Kohne House, which once graced a corner of Prairie Center, was a gain for the Captain Clapp House. Burned and vandalized, the Kohne House was slated for demolition when Ron had the good sense to remove from it an elaborate bay window, which he later installed in the east wall of the dining room. He also removed a cast iron fireplace painted to resemble marble, installing this in the dining room as well. The ceiling of the room had lost its crown molding, which Ron replaced, and he added ceiling tiles made to look like the decorative ceiling tin of the period.

The parlor's fireplace also needed restoration, and in the process Ron discovered that the back of the mantel had "Cranney" scrawled on it in chalk. The parlor bay window, which faces Front Street, is draped in lush old brocade and frames the cove with Mt. Baker in the distance.

Ron has made the downstairs bedroom into a library with a nautical theme. One wall is covered with the rich, dark panels and fluted half-columns from a paddlewheel steamboat.

NAS Whidbey CO is keynote speaker at Memorial Day parade

By Dennis Connolly

For those who attend Coupeville's Memorial Day Parade this Saturday, the parade, and day, will have different meanings.

For children, the parade could be fun and exciting; a chance to watch the floats roll by, scramble for the candy that is inevitably tossed from cars and marchers along the route, and munch on free hot dogs in Town Park afterward.

For civilians who never grew up around the military, the parade could mean an opportunity to visit neighbors and friends in a festive setting and pay tribute to those who served, and those sacrificed all, as members of America's armed forces.

For Capt. Stephen P. Black, commanding officer of Naval Air Station Whidbey Island and keynote speaker for the parade, it will be a day to honor and remember missing friends, naval aviators and shipmates — Capt. Black has known, flown with and served with throughout his Navy career.

"Having served 20 years in the military ... and having studied military history at length, I have a very good idea of what Memorial Day's about," the 42-year-old Pennsylvania native said Tuesday. "But it's an awareness not just of statistics, the number of people who have died in combat — but of faces and names of people I've read of in military history as well as those I've served with. Because of that, Memorial Day takes on a more personal meaning for me."

Black's service as a naval aviator began in 1982 and includes shore assignments in the United States, Japan and Russia, as well as extended sea deployments aboard the aircraft carriers, USS America, USS Coral Sea, USS John F. Kennedy and USS Nimitz, ships where Black accumulated 2,500 air hours and more than 700 carrier assisted landings in the EA-6B Prowler.

Black, a Notre Dame graduate who also has two masters degrees relating to national security, noted that since the terrorist attacks last September, this particular Memorial Day could have more significance for all Americans.

Soon one sill will be filled with a stained and leaded glass window Ron found on his travels.

Although the kitchen has been remodeled, it has a charming air of the past: a 1930's refrigerator and stove and a 1920's icebox spirit one back in time. The bathroom adjoining the kitchen has an antique marble corner sink and a claw-foot tub.

The beautiful maple staircase, which finally proved too steep for the Clapps, rises to the second floor from the paneled entrance hall. Upstairs are two lovely bedrooms under the gables and a tiny office painted a startling but oddly pleasant shade of green. The front bedroom, once the Clapps' and now a guest room, has a spectacular view one can imagine the Clapps missed after they moved anchor downstairs. Ron's bedroom is across the hall. French doors lead onto a balcony created by the dining room bay window below. Ron added

Black, a Notre Dame graduate who also has two masters degrees relating to national security, noted that since the terrorist attacks last September, this particular Memorial Day could have more significance for all Americans.

Capt. Stephen P. Black

"Because of what we've seen ... what happened in New York, Pennsylvania and at the Pentagon, I think this will be a more poignant Memorial Day because we won't take things for granted as we might have done in the more recent past," he said.

"We saw the names and faces of those lost, and we heard vignettes from the stories that made up their lives and the heroism that defined their last moments," Black said, adding:

"Those who died in combat in our nation's conflicts were men and women with stories as well — men and women who had families, hopes and dreams, an enduring desire to enjoy those things we often take for granted."

The stories are there if we choose to look, Black said. And for many of those who died in recent conflicts, we may already know their names and stories. More than one million combat casualties in all wars — their lifetimes cut short defending and defining our nation, our freedom, our values and our way of life.

"So I wonder, what is their legacy?" Black said of those heroes who have died in combat. "The answer, I believe is that we as Americans are clearly the direct benefactors of their sacrifice. Therefore, we are their legacy. How we choose to enjoy the freedom and liberty they secured for us is their one, true, tangible and lasting legacy. And that we choose to remember and honor them is a responsibility that we should never take for granted."

the doors and the small gable surmounting them last year.

Ron was born in Coupeville. Even when he was living in Oak Harbor as a child, he was drawn back over the years to the living evidence of history he has always appreciated. As a young boy, he would come over in his boat to while away the day, and he was surely the youngest member of the original Island County Historical Society, which had formed during a passionate but doomed attempt to save the old Coupeville courthouse.

Maybe Ron VanDyk did not fall in love with his house at first sight, but it has been a love story ever since.

OBITUARIES

Carl Helmer Johnson

Carl Helmer Johnson of Coupeville, died May 16, 2002 of age-related causes. He was 90.

Mr. Johnson was born April 4, 1912 in Butte, Montana to Swan and Emma Johnson. He lived in Butte until the age of nine, when the family moved to Spokane, Washington. He graduated from Lewis & Clark High School in 1931. He attended North Park College in Chicago.

Mr. Johnson was trained and employed as a butcher. In 1942, he enlisted in the Navy and served for the duration of World War II.

Carl married Evelyn Erickson in Spokane, Washington on Jan. 2, 1943. They moved to Seattle to reside, then to Whidbey Island in 1947. He worked in Mt. Vernon as a butcher and on Whidbey Island selling life insurance and products for Fuller Brush Company. In Spokane he was a member of the First Covenant Church (formerly the Covenant Swedish Tabernacle) and on Whidbey Island he was in close fellowship with Island Ministries.

Carl is survived by one brother-in-law, Howard Pearson of Spokane, Washington; one sister-in-law, Helen Erickson of Des Moines, Washington; and one niece, Carol Hawn of Springfield, Oregon. His wife Evelyn preceded him in death in 1986.

Cremation was held. A memorial service will be held at 2:30 p.m. July 21, 2002 at Calvary Chapel, 1560 SE 9th Avenue, Oak Harbor with the Rev. Stuart Corey and the Rev. Robert Whitlow officiating. Remembrances may be made to Island Ministries or to Wycliffe Bible Translators, Inc. Funeral arrangements are under the direction of Burley Funeral Chapel, Oak Harbor.

Herman Alexander Duysings

Memorial services for Herman A. Duysings will be held at 7 p.m. on Friday, May 24, 2002 at Sovereign Grace Orthodox Presbyterian Church, Oak Harbor with Pastor Robert C. VanKooten officiating. Visitation for family and friends will be held Friday from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. at Burley Funeral Chapel, Oak Harbor.

Herman Alexander Duysings, 78, died suddenly at his home in Greenbank on May 18, 2002. He was born January 29, 1924 in Solo, Indonesia to Hubertus and Helena (Engelken) Duysings. He was raised in Indonesia. With the Japanese occupation of Indonesia during World War II, he was held in a concentration camp for three and one-half years.

Following the war, Herman entered the Dutch Air Force Academy in Indonesia. He completed two years of training, but was forced to leave due to health reasons. He worked on rubber and tea plantations for several years while completing correspondence training as an engineer. He was married to Willy Monsanto in Jakarta, Indonesia on October 15, 1948. Following the completion of his education, Herman left for Holland, where he worked for five years as an engineer.

In 1960, Herman came to the United States, settling in the Los Angeles area, where he was employed as a structural and mining engineer. He received his U.S. citizenship in 1967. Herman moved on to the San Francisco bay area, continuing his engineering work and also operated a small construction company in the bay area for eight years.

Herman retired in 1989 and he and Willy moved to Whidbey Island. He built their retirement home in the Greenbank area. Herman loved the outdoors, especially hunting, fishing, shooting and spending time with his family.

Mr. Duysings was an active member of the Sovereign Grace Orthodox Presbyterian Church of Oak Harbor, carrying out his desire to serve the Lord. He was also a member of the Bayview Senior Center, a life member of the National Rifle Association

Whidbey Writers Group publishes fourth book

Have you ever seen a selkie in Puget Sound? If you moved a manor house, stone by stone, from Scotland to Whidbey Island, would the ghost come along? Have you ever gone into carwash in one place and come out in another? Have you ever taken your pet alligator to visit your grandmother? These are some of the fantasies in "Take Our Words for Whidbey," a new book of stories, poems, essays, and oral history written by 15 members of the Whidbey Writers Group and published by Gull Rock Publishing, Oak Harbor. All of the pieces in this book are set on Whidbey Island, from a factual tour of downtown Coupeville to the fictional discovery of a dead body on Long Point Beach. The beach is prominent in stories, poems, and essays about tides, logs, agates, whales, and security. A reverie takes the reader into an enchanted forest through which a mythical stream runs. One story is set in a nursing home; and in another, a man with Alzheimer's drives his granddaughter all over the area looking for his home. One story describes a Whidbey Island Christmas, and one is about a Dutchman and his dog. In one essay and in the Oral History section of the book, four natives of Whidbey talk about what the island was like in the early and middle part of the 20th century.

The Whidbey Writers come from far and wide. Murray Anderson and Mariellen Tissot are Whidbey natives in the group. Herb McDonald and Dorothy Read are the only other native Washingtonians. Ann Gerike is from Wyoming, as is Kaye LaTorra Erickson. From the Midwest came Jackie Griesinger Wisconsin). Susan Greisinger (Iowa) and Gail Madden (The native Texans are Suzanne Fulle, Rowena Williamson, and Ann Adams. Photographs and cover design are by Philip Williamson, who was born in California. Johna Christensen fled Copenhagen with her parents to escape the Nazis during World War II. Sandra McGillivray Ortgies was born in Canada. Nunn is from New Jersey and Bill Wilson, Florida..

Take Our Words for Whidbey is the fourth book the Whidbey Writers Group has published. Copies are available in Whidbey Island bookstores, or may be ordered by calling Rowena Williamson at 678-6058 or Gull Rock Publishing, toll-free, at 866-309-8588.

GUEST COMMENTARY Medicare program ailing

By Congressman Rick Larsen

Medicare, the federal health care program for older Americans, needs its own health care check up if Congress is going to maintain its commitment to our nation's older Americans.

Seniors and health care providers delivered this basic message to me in a series of five town hall meetings and three health care roundtables I held in August 2001 and February 2002. Due to this direct input, I have developed a five point plan to address what I think is the number one health care priority facing our communities this decade: protecting Medicare and ensuring health care for older Americans.

The health care challenge Congress faces is clear. Washington state's senior population grew 15 percent in the last decade and will represent 12 percent of the population in 2010. Seniors are living longer and more healthy lives as well. Despite these clear facts, the Bush Administration budget shortchanges Medicare by nearly 20 percent over the next decade. The challenges facing our seniors are tough enough.

First, the current Medicare formula is unfair to Washington state seniors. Due to a basic formula that rewards inefficiency, the average Medicare reimbursement rates for physicians and Medicare+Choice plans in Washington are dramatically less than rates in other states. These dismal reimbursement rates lead not only to a decreasing choice of health care options,

One hospital administrator told me that the low reimbursements would not be so bad if the regulations weren't so onerous. Medicare regulations divert health care providers from providing health care. At one clinic in the area, 47 percent of staff time is spent on paperwork. Regulations are strangling seniors' health care.

The combination of low reimbursements, lack of providers, and stifling regulations have led me to one conclusion: Medicare needs a serious health care checkup. I propose five steps to help protect Medicare.

First, the Bush Administration unfortunately does not propose helping physicians whose Medicare payments were cut by 5.4 percent this year. These cuts will devastate doctors' ability to provide quality care to seniors. Many in Congress are committed to fixing this problem, but the Administration's budget leaves no room for any solution. Instead, the Bush Administration proposes taking money from other Medicare providers - simply shifting the problem. I will work closely with my colleagues here in Congress to restore this 5.4 percent cut to physicians.

Second, I have co-sponsored the bipartisan Medicare Access and Equity Act of 2001 to return long-term fairness to reimbursement rates. Passage of this important legislation will bring more money to Washington state and provide greater access for seniors to the health care services they need. I am also re-juvenating the Fairness Caucus to bring together the collective political muscle of counties that have chronically low reimbursement rates.

Third, Congress should recognize the regulatory burden under which physicians do their job by passing HR 868, the Medicare Education and Regulatory Fairness Act and HR 3391, the Medicare Regulatory and Contracting Reform Act. Both pieces of legislation will go a long way toward decreasing Medicare regulations and provide flexibility to Medicare administrators in helping hospitals and physicians to provide care to seniors. Fourth, the provider shortage extends beyond just physicians. The country faces a severe nursing shortage and gaps in the availability in other health care workers. Both chambers have passed a version of the Nursing Reinvestment Act, a bill designed to increase the number of nursing faculty and create scholarship incentives to bring more people into the nursing profession. Fifth, a prescription drug benefit for all seniors continues to be a priority. Seniors

Greenbank Farm ideal for wind turbine

Editor,

I'd like to provide some information regarding a potential wind turbine at the Greenbank Farm. The 10 wind turbines that are to be installed around the Northwest for this demonstration project are considered "small" or "residential" class turbines.

The wind turbines for this project, partially funded with a grant from National Renewable Energy Laboratory, have 10-foot long blades and are usually put on 80 to 120-foot towers. These residential-sized wind turbines are capable of providing a maximum instantaneous output of 10 kilowatts of power. The energy that the turbine produces, which depends on the windspeed, may be around 1200 kilowatt-hours per month at that particular site (power is analogous to the speed of your car, while energy is like the number of miles you've traveled in a certain amount of time).

A wind turbine provided under this grant would almost certainly be financially viable for two reasons: 1) A large portion of the cost of the turbine, tower and installation would be paid for by grant, and possibly by individual or institutional investors who are looking to resell the "green attributes" of the power generated; and 2) The power produced must be purchased by the Utility (PSE) at the same rate as the Utility sells its power under the State's Net Metering law. Thus, small consumer-generators get paid (actually credited) the retail power rate whereas the utility-scale wind producers get paid at the wholesale rate of electricity. Regarding visual impact: A wind turbine is certainly no more disturbing than each of the hundreds of poles that support the two high-voltage power lines that traverse the length of Whidbey Island, right past Greenbank Farm.

I, personally, believe that the sight of a wind turbine generating clean power right where it's needed is beautiful. Regarding noise: This particular turbine produces a slight "whooshing" sound which can be heard if you are near it. It is difficult to discern a sound if you're more than 300 feet away. As the wind speed increases the blade speed increases, but ambient wind noise also increases, masking the sounds of the turbine. Regarding ing impact on birds: Wind turbines generally do not impact birds. The few specific cases of utility-scale turbines causing damage to bird life was due to the turbines being located in an updraft area of a building or bluff, or in a narrow pass.

There is no credible evidence of small wind turbines disrupting or killing birds. Many more birds are killed by collisions with windows and by vehicles than during collisions with wind turbine structures. The Greenbank Farm has only applied to be considered as a host site for one of the wind turbines provided for under this program at this stage. None of the 10 sites have been awarded yet. However, we believe that the Farm would be an ideal location to host a demonstration wind turbine. What better way to further the Farms' mission of sustainability than to generate its' own clean power!? And, what a great example that could be for all of us to rely less on the electrical blood being pumped onto Whidbey via those high-voltage arteries!

Beware the sunburn; unicyclist's on his way

According to the commercials that bombard us on television, we do have a choice. We can be rid of our aches and pains by taking a brand new wonder drug — but in exchange for losing those aches and pains, we may suffer stomach cramps, nausea, insomnia or a dozen other problems that make what we had seem mighty insignificant.

Given that, it's hard to be serious about the printout that accompanies a new medication, but I do read it. I knew that one of the pills could cause "sun sensitivity." Well, not to worry, a sun worshiper I am not but it didn't take long to realize that just a few minutes in the sun made me woozy.

Last week, I took advantage of the cloudy days and weeded a flowerbed or two. On the second day, neighbor Nita Coates warned me that cloudy or not, the sun's rays were still there! Oops!

Mother's Day, Shellie and Randy served barbecued ribs outside. Oh, I was ready. Sat with my back to the sun, covered from head to toe, sun-screen slathered on my face, a hat on my head and long sleeves and jeans. I was sure all would be well. Not so. Within minutes, both eyes started watering and stinging. By the time Shellie drove me home, both eyelids were puffy.

Tuesday morning, it looked like I'd fallen face first into a can of red paint; red cheeks, red ears, red eyes. Actually, my eyes had shrunk to less than half-mast and the swelling across the bridge of my nose was joined on either side with puffiness. My skin was dry and I itched everywhere — my head, legs, neck but especially my hands.

A week after a trip to the doctor for a change in medication, a hot oil hair treatment and a gallon of Intensive Care lotion, my skin is still itching and peeling, but I feel pretty good. Another week or two and I can be back outside. Until then, I'll just watch those pesky horsetails multiply in the rock garden.

After months of riding his unicycle on Whidbey Island to get in shape for his cross-country trip from Neah Bay, Washington to New York and the Statue of Liberty, Lars Clausen peddled up McDonald Pass out of Helena, Montana and crossed the Continental Divide on May 17.

On April 29, 2002, Lars left Camp Flattery in Neah Bay, Washington cheered on by friends and family. Neither he nor his riding partners were aware that an eagle was following them marking the beginning of their adventure. He's been welcomed and fed in a half dozen little towns in Washington, Idaho and now Montana by crowds of unicycle enthusiasts, church members or just plain people who want to see this Lutheran pastor and cheer him on as he pedals toward New York City and the Statue of Liberty.

Lars has set the goal of raising $5 million for the native people on Alaska's Seward Peninsula where he served his first pastorate. At last count, his One Wheel — Many Spokes fund has reached a little over $200,000.

His family, wife Anne and children KariAnna, 8 and Kai, 6 are following him in their motor home along with other friends on bikes or unicycles. The group gathers at a pre-set site at day's end to eat and spend the night.

Lars is in contact with the world on his cell phone as he travels. "That's the one thing I haven't gotten used to," he said, "riding along on my unicycle seven feet in the air peddling my wheel and talking on the phone."

We'll catch up with him again later on his trip.

It'll be a busy Saturday!

Beginning at 9 a.m. at the Coupeville Recreation Hall, Books by the Cove in support of the Friends of the Library; at 11 a.m., the Central Whidbey Chamber of Commerce-supported Memorial Day Parade ending in Town Park for a Remembrance Ceremony, music, an antique car show and more; from 1 p.m. until 4 p.m., the Jenne House and Farm will be open for viewing thanks to Fran Einterz and Joyce Peterson; then, at 7 p.m. in the Performing Arts Center at Coupeville High and Middle Schools, the first production of The Adventures of Lewis & Clark. Sponsored by Concerts on the Cove, it features students from Liz Sherman's Learning Connection, the Oak Harbor Home Connection and dancers with Cilla Whatcott. The second and third performances are Sunday at 3 p.m. and 7 p.m. That performance I don't want to miss.

'Armed Services Editions' revived

BOOK REMARKS

By Karen Rothboeck

My mother's father went into World War I carrying a small copy of the New Testament in his uniform pocket, but it's interesting to think that the next generation of soldiers may have had Willa Cather's "Death Comes to the Archbishop" or James Cain's "The Postman Always Rings Twice" in theirs. It might seem odd, but one of the battles a soldier sometimes fought was boredom. With that in mind, a World War II organization gave soldiers free books, custom printed in a 4x5-3/8-inch format that allowed the book to fit in a uniform pocket.

The book give-away, established by the Council on Books in Wartime, took place from 1943 to 1947. More than 123 million copies of the books were distributed, with 1,324 different titles. In what is probably the largest collection available today, the University of Notre Dame has copies of 1,064 of the titles.

The book's small, horizontally rectangular format allowed four copies to be printed at once, with pages cut and separated after printing. The books had simple, three- or four-color covers, a bold circle proclaiming they were an Armed Services Edition, and a disclaimer that said "This is the complete book — not a digest."

There are many people now who enjoy collecting these editions, and it is still possible to find the books for sale at used bookstores or over the Internet in a $15 to $45 price range. But in an interesting new development, after more than half a century since the last book give-away, a new title has recently been released.

The book is "War Letters" by Andrew Carroll. Washington Square Press and the Veterans of Foreign War are collaborating to make more than 2.5 million copies of the book available to soldiers — and yes, they are still free.

Carroll is himself a collector of ASEs and so things seem to have come satisfyingly full circle, with an author who likes the books being able to see his own creation published in the same format, right down to the ASE circle and the disclaimer on the cover.

If you go to a used bookstore to look for some of the WWII vintage books, you might also want to keep your eye out for a book published in 1984, John Y. Cole's "Books in Action: The Armed Services Editions" for a complete overview of the works.

But out of the bookstore and back to the battlefield: Think of mystery writer Raymond Chandler, western author Max Brand, and Tarzan creator Edgar Rice Burroughs, along with several poets and nonfiction writers, in the trenches. Literally they may not have been there, but figuratively they certainly were, and provided their own brand of moral support to the troops.

for medications. That is wrong. A prescription drug benefit in Medicare must be combined with the triple effort to make generic prescription drugs more available in the market, encourage research into the next generation of medications that help meet seniors' health care needs, and speed the drug approval process.

Protecting Medicare requires that it get its own health plan so that this critical program is available in the future for seniors. Despite its problems, Medicare will continue to be the primary source of health care for older Americans. Congress must act to protect and strengthen Medicare to keep the country's commitment to seniors' health.

Unauthorized sale of property (Due on Sale) Deed of Trust Revert title to permitted vestee

IV. The sum owing on the obligation secured by the Deed of Trust is: Principal Balance of $122,588.42, together with interest as provided in the note or other instrument secured from 03/01/00, and such other costs and fees as are due under the Note or other instrument secured, and as are provided by statute.

V. The above-described real property will be sold to satisfy the expense of sale and the obligation secured by the Deed of Trust as provided by statute. The sale will be made without warranty, express or implied regarding title, possession, or encumbrances on May 31, 2002. The default(s) referred to in paragraph III, together with any subsequent payments, late charges, advances costs and fees thereafter due, must be cured by 05/20/02 (11 days before the sale date), to cause a discontinuance of the sale. The sale will be discontinued and terminated if at any time before the close of the Trustee's business on 05/20/02 (11 days before the sale date), the default(s) as set forth in paragraph III, together with any subsequent payments, late charges, advances, costs and fees thereafter due, is/are cured and the Trustee's fees and costs are paid. The sale may be terminated any time after 05/20/02 (11 days before the sale date), and before the sale by the Borrower, Grantor, any Guarantor or the holder of any recorded junior lien or encumbrance paying the entire balance of principal and interest secured by the Deed of Trust, plus costs, fees, and advances, if any made pursuant to the terms of the obligation and/or Deed of Trust.

VI. A written notice of default was transmitted by the Beneficiary or Trustee to the Borrower and Grantor at the following address(es): NAME AND ADDRESS

Brett A. Corning 940 South Gary Lane Camano Island, WA 98292 Jane Doe Corning, spouse of Brett A. Corning 940 South Gary Lane Camano Island, WA 98292 by both first class and either certified mail, return receipt requested, or registered mail on 08/21/00, proof of which is in the possession of the Trustee; and on 08/23/00 Grantor and Borrower were personally served with said written notice of default or the written notice of default was posted on a conspicuous place on the real property described in paragraph I above, and the Trustee has possession of proof of such service or posting.

VII. The Trustee whose name and address are set forth below will provide in writing to anyone requesting it a statement of all foreclosure costs and trustee's fees due at any time prior to the sale.

VIII. The effect of the sale will be to deprive the Grantor and all those who hold by, through or under the Grantor of all their right, title and interest in the above-described property.

IX. Anyone having any objection to the sale on any grounds whatsoever will be afforded an opportunity to be heard as to those objections if they bring a lawsuit to restrain the sale pursuant to RCW 61.24.130. Failure to bring such a lawsuit may result in a waiver of any proper grounds for invalidating the Trustee's sale.

X. NOTICE TO OCCUPANTS OR TENANTS — The purchaser at the Trustee's Sale is entitled to possession of the property on the 20th day following the sale, as against the Grantor under the deed of trust (the owner) and anyone having an interest junior to the deed of trust, including occupants and tenants. After the 20th day following the sale the purchaser has the right to evict occupants and tenants by summary proceedings under the unlawful detainer act, Chapter 59.12 RCW. 30-DAY SUMMONS BY PUBLICATION, NOTICE OF ADOPTION HEARING AND INTENT TO TERMINATE PARENTAL RIGHTS

TO: Namfon Chumhuen, the Natural Father; and Clerk of Court To the Natural Father: A Petition for Adoption and

Termination of Parental Rights has been filed in the above-entitled Court by Richard L. Readshaw, Petitioner and Spouse of Boonruen Readshaw, the Natural Mother of the above-referenced minor children. Your status as natural father is stated in official documents of Thailand, but your whereabouts is unknown, and there is no indication that you reside in the United States or its territories. The Petitioner's claim is stated in the written Petition for Adoption, a copy of which is on file with the above-entitled Court.

That the minor child, THITIPONG CHUMHUEN, whose Natural Mother is Boonruen Readshaw, was born on May 23 1984 in Bangkok, Thailand. That the minor child, KOBKIEAT CHUMHUEN, whose Natural Mother is Boonruen Readshaw, was born on December 1, 1986 in Samutprakarn, Thailand. In order to defend against the termination of your parental rights, you must respond to the Petition by stating your objection/defense in writing, and serve a copy upon the person signing this Summons within thirty (30) days after first publication of the Summons, or a default judgment may be entered against you without notice. A default judgment is one where plaintiff is entitled to what he asks for because you have not responded. If you serve a notice of appearance on the undersigned person, you are entitled to notice before a default judgment may be entered.

If you wish to seek the advice of an attorney in this matter, you should do so promptly so that your written response, if any, may be served on time. You are entitled to appointed counsel if you are indigent and request counsel. Termination of your parent-child relationship with

The Town of Coupeville has issued a Determination of Nonsignificance (DNS) under the State Environmental Policy Act Rules (Chapter 197-11 WAC) for the following proposal:

DATE: May 23, 2002 CASE NO: ZA 01-01

PROPOSAL: Rezone a 22,400 square foot parcel within Planned Area 1 from RM-9600 to Town Commercial for use as a coffee shop and retail/office space

APPLICANT: Frank and Miriam Meyer LOCATION: 200 South Main Street, Coupeville, WA (in front of Big Rock Apts) After review of a completed environmental checklist and other information on file with the Town of Coupeville, it has been determined that this proposal will not have a probable significant adverse impact on the environment, and that an environmental impact statement is not required under RCW 43.21.030(2)(C). Copies of the DNS are available at no charge from the Town of Coupeville, 4 NE Seventh Street, Coupeville, WA, 98239. This determination is issued under WAC 197-11-340(1) with the comment period combined earlier with the Notice of Application. The Town of Coupeville Environmental Official has determined that local regulations adequately mitigate to a level of nonsignificance all potential environmental impacts from this proposal. You may appeal this decision to the Town of Coupeville at the above address within 15 days from this final determination, or no later than June 7, 2002.

Halicki's 'The Junkman' is pure shredded metal

Go lock your brain up. OK, now that we're all alone, with no pesky brain cells left hanging around where they could get accidentally fried, we can talk about the drool-inducing, synapse-melting early '80s doozy known as "The Junkman."

For some people, all I need to mention is the fact this is the film which holds the Guinness Book of World Records mark as the motion picture in which the most cars, planes, motorcycles and houses are thrashed, torn asunder, sent through a threshing machine and generally blown into itty-bitty little pieces.

The rest of you may inquire about a coherent plot. A display of acting ability by those involved. A script not written on the back of a lunchbag.

To which I reply...whoa, look at the metal fly, sweet mama!

Because when you're talking about the films crafted by the late H.B.

REEL TIME

By David Svien

"Toby" Halicki, you're only really talking about one thing. And that's shredded metal, baby.

In "The Junkman" and its predecessor, the original non-Nicolas Cage version of "Gone in 60 Seconds," Halicki, the star/director/writer/producer/patron saint of car shows and drive-in double features everywhere, gave shredded metal like nobody else before or since.

We're talking no seatbelts, no special effects, no use of the brakes. Ever. Just strap the camera to the hood and let's go play bumper cars in rush hour traffic at 90 miles per hour.

There are certain times when all you can ask for in a film is the sight of a Cadillac being strafed by bomb-dropping biplanes while zigzagging through a fairgrounds crowded with convention goers on hand to remember James Dean.

Or an old lady clattering down the street in little more than a seat and steering wheel, because the other half of her car is now plastered to the Corvette which just sliced through the back end of her car like an out-of-control buzz saw on wheels.

"The Junkman" was hand-tooled, with fine American craftsmanship, for times just like that.

Halicki was what he was, an auto nut who earned the nickname "The Car Crash King" the old-fashioned way — one pile of twisted metal at a time. His premature death, due to a failed stunt while filming "Gone in 60 Seconds II" in the late '80s, brought an end to a freewheeling career.

His legacy remains alive, though, every time someone lets another brain cell die while giggling over one of his high-speed metal mosh pits.

Because remember, you've got a lot of brain cells. Giving up one or two to keep the memory of Toby Halicki alive is the least you can do.

Schiffman Chiropractic

360-279-8900

Dr. Steve Schiffman says that addressing a chiropractic problem early can save sometimes expensive complications later.

An end to suffering and a cure for an aching back

"Oh my aching back!"

How many times have you heard that, or thought or said that, and realized you or the party in pain would probably do nothing about it?

But a sore neck or back doesn't have to be a condition to endure or accept. In fact, doing something about it could keep you healthier and happier in the long run.

According to Dr. Steve Schiffman of Schiffman Chiropractic in Oak Harbor, one major benefit in seeking chiropractic care for a sore back or stiff neck can be in preventing more serious problems down the line.

"One of the biggest benefits can be of a preventative nature before the symptoms become advanced," Schiffman says. "Spinal joint problems rarely heal themselves properly however, so with proper chiropractic care early, problems can be corrected before things degenerate more."

At Schiffman Chiropractic, the solutions to those problems always start with a free consultation. So if you think you might be having a back problem, it will cost you nothing to find out.

After the consultation, the healing process begins with a complete examination of the spine and painful areas and often includes x-rays.

"Through the exam we trace the symptoms back to the root cause and using chiropractic adjustments, mobilize those joints that are found to be restrictive," Schiffman says. "Our focus is to reduce nerve irritation by mobilizing joints — most often in the spine or in the arms or legs as we need to."

The result can not only bring relief to the painful area, but it can help protect other areas of the body as well. Schiffman says that when something is out of whack in the skeletal system, it tends to have a negative domino effect.

For example, someone with osteoarthritis in one knee often ends up with pain in the other knee because they put too much stress on it trying to protect the other.

Still, there are those who will put up with a sore back until it becomes a damaged back. At that point, their options — which can include surgery, long rehab periods and a pronounced need for pain medication — are rarely so inexpensive or benign as chiropractic.

But that's their choice. What about you, and your painful back? You can 'tough it out,' and hope your back pain goes away, and possibly risk more serious damage and pain while you wait.

Or you could call Schiffman Chiropractic at (360) 279-8900 and make an appointment for a free consultation and quite possibly, relief from nagging pain that's gone on too long.

It's your back.
