A "Locomobile" fording White River, Indiana, below Inlet Springs

Any hill that a team can climb will not stop your carriage. Deep sand is the worst enemy, but with a little manipulation I crossed the Santa Maria River, which is certainly deeper sand than I have ever attempted to drive horses through. A person touring should be careful to find out the depth of the streams. You can cross with safety to a depth of one foot and ten inches. . . . —Extract from a customer's letter.
