Firm, Workers Raise Old Glory

Employees and management of the Crowell Corp. of Newport joined this week in a project to put Old Glory high above the plant.

A company spokesman said the workers, members of the Paper and Pulp Employees' Union, decided to obtain a 35-foot pole and flag and had raised $200 toward its cost. The profits came from a soft drink vending machine.

When the plan was submitted to the company, Herbert Adelman, president, agreed to provide a matching amount to see the project successfully completed.

Approximately 75 employees work at the facility which converts paper to ceiling tape and gum specialties. They were on hand this week with officials to see the pole raised but the event was accomplished without a ceremony.

went out of control shortly after midnight.
