Leah and Sandy arrived at the church in Killington, Vermont, in a 1911 Mountain Wagon Stanley Steamer — causing quite a sensation. After the ceremony, he, she and the family piled back into the Steamer for the trip back to Leah's house in Woodstock and a lawn reception. At left, the whole family posed for a portrait under a typically-New England covered bridge in West Woodstock. Curtis and Don Bourdon own the Steamer, which was assembled over a period of three years from Stanley parts acquired from all over the nation, and rent it to tourists who want to see the Vermont countryside in something more exotic than a family sedan.
