The beautiful proportions of this lamp belie its smaller size. Instead of a ten inch font, this lamp accommodates an eight inch fitter. It is presented in a handsome patinated finish with gilt highlights. Cast foliate leaves appoint sections of the standard. The lamp is raised on small turned feet and features a beautiful blown and cut shade.

A Regency Two-Light Argand

England, Circa 1825, Attributed to Thomas Messenger
Bronze, brass, and glass
Height: 21 1/2" Width: 16"

In the landmark exhibition, Classical America 1815-1845, at The Newark Museum in 1963, a nearly identical lamp was exhibited and appears in the catalog as Plate 198 on pages 148 and 157. The urn-shaped font with scrolling handles and a classical wreath mount has a domed top to accommodate a larger oil reservoir. A caryatid draped in a robe standing on a triple-stepped plinth composes the standard. The lamp is offered in a handsome patinated finish with gilt highlights.
