INTELLECTUAL HONESTY

George Washington once said, "I hope I shall always possess firmness and virtue to maintain what I consider the most enviable of all titles—the character of an honest man."

Am I intellectually honest? This question is one that each individual may ask himself. This may be done privately since many resent their honesty questioned by others.

By a few well defined characteristics one's intellectual honesty may be determined. To be intellectually honest one must be able to see all sides of a question clearly, to eliminate self interest in judgment affecting the welfare of others, to shun prejudices; he must be religious personally and politically.

Intellectual honesty is a cornerstone of integrity and distinguishes a person as a seeker of truth and not a self-seeker.

The greatest obstacle to successful adult education is the tendency of mature minds to follow firm, established thought patterns.

Intellectual honesty is a challenge to the young people of the Kamehameha Schools.—E. K.

ARE YOU ONE OF THOSE?

A person who laughs at the wrong places and at the wrong time may think he is smart. He is really showing to others around him how stupid and unintelligent he is. It not only reflects his character but his training.

Are you one of those?—M. C.-H.

'ON PARADE'

Several times each year, the cadets pass through the streets of Honolulu in parade. This Saturday, Kamehameha is "on parade" to her graduates and friends. Coming back to Kamehameha, they will see the many improvements and the work of the students and faculty.

Hoolaulea means the education of the friends and graduates in the work Kamehameha is doing in the territory. Our visitors will come, see and return impressed by Kamehameha's spirit in the work she is doing.—E. M.

CONDITION

Condition is one of the things which an athlete needs.

Condition is not obtained easily but takes weeks and even months.

One of the sports in which condition is very essential is track. A trackster is usually on his own in the events which he enters except perhaps for the relay teams. If one member of that relay team lacks the condition which his fellow teammates possess, the victory of the team may be at a risk. He is casting his burden upon the shoulders of his teammates.

Condition is also easy to lose. A person may take months of hard work and work into a good condition, but drinking, smoking and lack of sleep may cause him to lose this in a week.

To get into condition a person must not drink or smoke. He should have plenty of rest and good food. As Mr. E. B. DeGroot, instructor of physical education at the Kamehameha school for boys, says, a person is distinguished mostly by the type of food he eats. If he eats carrots he will be as strong as a carrot. If he eats cream puffs he will be likewise.

Many students in high school are influenced to drink and smoke because they see other people doing it.

Frank Luisetti, famous basketball star, now a famous movie actor in Paramount studios, says. "There are lots of kids in this country who think me a representative athlete. If they saw me drinking and smoking or if they read that I said it was good for athletes to drink and smoke, they might be influenced to start such habits before they are old enough to know what they are doing. It may be silly but I feel that because I am regarded as an athlete I have to be careful of such things because of the kids. I was a kid myself not so long ago and I remember how I used to pattern after athletes."

Luisetti refused to smoke and drink when he acted in his first picture, "Campus Confessions." — The Shield—W. W. S.

Robert Eskridge Relates Life to Ka Moi Reporter

By WINONA BEAMER

I rang the buzzer, the door opened and a friendly voice said, "Come in, come in."

"So you want an interview! Well, well, my life isn't much to tell about but anyway sit down, sit down."

That was the voice of Robert Lee Eskridge, well-known artist and author of Hawaii. He was born in Pennsylvania, a child of unusual artistic ability. He attended the Philipsburg High school and later the South Pasadena High school in California from which he graduated. All through his high school years Mr. Eskridge was greatly interested in painting and decided to make it a profession. He entered the University of Southern California Art school upon his high school graduation, studying and painting outdoor scenes. Later he studied figure and commercial art with the Chicago Art Institute and the Chicago Studio of Fine Arts. By this time Mr. Eskridge had done numerous sketches and paintings. In 1914 some of these water color paintings were accepted in the National Water Color Show. In 1915 another water color exhibit was displayed at the Pan-Pacific Exposition where Mr. Eskridge was awarded a medal for excellent painting. In 1918 Mr. Eskridge and his boyhood chum, Charles Burchfield, also an artist, enlisted in the army at Fort Jackson, Fla. They used their artistic ability in the camouflage section making papier mache tree trunks, hills and such in which were concealed telescopes, cannons and other firearms.

After the war Mr. Eskridge went to Europe for two and a half years to study art. In France he studied under Andre L'Hote, Bernard de Mouville and other famous painters. He traveled to Spain and North Africa doing various sketches. In 1924 Mr. Eskridge exhibited these sketches in the Salon de Independence in Chicago. Paintings were also exhibited at the Marshall Fields Childs Art House. In 1927 Mr. Eskridge made his first trip to Tahiti. In 1928 he made his second trip and in 1929 his third. It was on this trip that he visited Manga Reva and wrote his book entitled "Manga Reva, Forgotten Isle." He then went back to Chicago and painted murals in the Palmer House hotel in Illinois and in Milwaukee he designed the swimming pool of the Schroeder hotel. The Martin Chan prize was awarded Mr. Eskridge for his picture called "Huki-Lau." At the American Painters and Sculptors in Chicago other Hawaiian paintings were exhibited. In 1933 Mr. Eskridge wrote his second book, "South Sea Playmates," and made his first trip to Hawaii. Here he painted and later exhibited these paintings at the Maurice Sterne Galleries in New York. In 1935 he came back to the islands where he wrote and published "Umi," the story of the boy who became king. It was declared the book of the month of March during 1936, by a famed group of judges including Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the president. Since 1936 Mr. Eskridge has lived in Honolulu making inter-island trips painting portraits and various landscape scenes. He also wrote, painted and gathered information for a new book "On to Kamehameha," which is now awaiting publication. Another book, "The Shining Road," which is a story of the travels of Mr. Eskridge and his many adventures, has also been added to his list of delightful books.

Mr. Eskridge has used many Kamehameha students as models for his paintings. Among them are Francis Beamer, Haunani Cooper, Samuel Martinson, William Daniels, Kini Pea, Joseph Hao, James Kamakaiwi, and Josephine Keanoano. Many of these were exhibited at the Gumps' Studio of Art and at the Academy of Arts. Mr. Eskridge has painted many landscapes and mountains and, most of all, people of the Hawaiian race. Mr. Eskridge gave his own reasons for his choice of Hawaii as a background for his paintings.

"I like the big leaves and the splashy colors in the scenery of Hawaii. I like the beauty of the Hawaiian people, their well-built bodies and their bronzed, tanned color."

Quite recently Mr. Eskridge painted the murals in the Ala Moana sports pavilion in which he depicted an old Makahiki and the Festival of Lono, God of Games.

"Some day I hope to paint a Hawaiian hula girl and until then I intend to make Hawaii my home."

Mr. Eskridge rose from within the depths of his comfortable easy chair and said, "Well I guess that's all I have to say about myself."

As a polite reporter I said, "Did you say your life was dull and uneventful?" With that he extended his hand and with a modest smile a delightful interview came to a close.

A beggar through the world am I,
From place to place I wander by;
Fill up my pilgrim's scrip for me,
For Christ's sweet sake and charity

—Lowell.
