

in conversation for quite some time.

According to him the conversation went thus:

"I have been watching you all night and you really turn me on."

He answered, "Oh!"

"You know you are really handsome. Don't be surprised if I walk up into your office one day and just right out rape you."

He blushed and finally ended the awkward conversation to rejoin his wife.

October Has Many Fond Memories

October is the month when everyone begins to make serious preparations for the winter ahead. It's also a time of remembering. For me, it's a time when I remember bits and pieces of old and beloved poems like "The North wind doth blow and we shall have snow" . . . or "There was a roaring in the wind all night" . . . These poems contain lines that are still popular today.

There's something else that I remember about October . . . and that is going to Sears to shop for winter apparel. Through the years, we've bought a lot of clothing at Sears, but I guess I enjoyed getting a new winter coat best of all. So in my childhood memories, not only did October hold the excitement of Halloween, but the greater fun of shopping for a new winter coat.

What's Different Today?

It's October again, and of course, years later. But from what I can see, children of all ages are still delighted to go to Sears for new winter coats. However, now there's a much bigger selection of new styles and fabrics from which to choose. Reversibles, fuzzies, pile-lined, water resistant fabrics, ski jackets, hooded and non-hooded coats . . . all are part of the truly wide assortment you'll find at Sears.

In fact, Sears probably has one of the largest selections of coats and outerwear for your entire family that you can find anywhere. That's something we busy mothers really appreciate. And it's why I still go to Sears, after all these years, and shop for my winter coat.
