Foreword

Dear Readers:

People have often wondered why we call our yearbook HARDSCRABBLE. It is interesting to note that it goes back to the history of Red Hook.

Upper Red Hook was always known as Red Hook until the postmaster transferred his residence to "Hardscrabble," which became Red Hook's post office.

Just why it was called "Hardscrabble" and what the origin of the name is, are unknown; however, there is a legend about it. It is told that a peddler was once going through Red Hook. Having found it very difficult to sell his wares, he remarked as he left town, "That was certainly a mighty "hard scrabble."

Thus, our yearbook has always been called HARDSCRABBLE because the name is so closely linked with Red Hook.

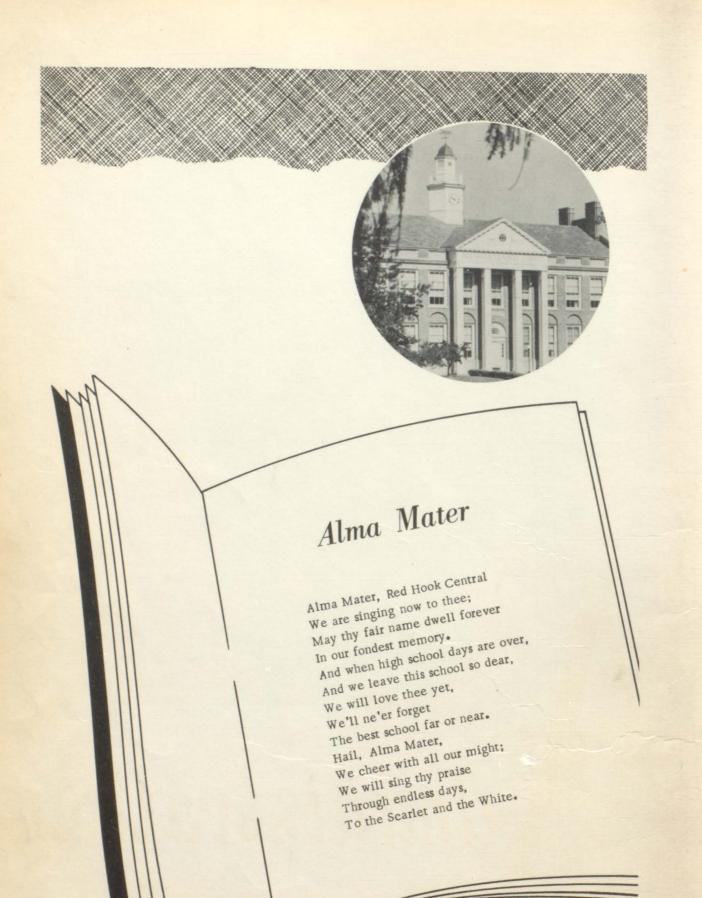

We, the Class of 1954, take much pleasure in dedicating this yearbook to Clifton C. Thorne, our homeroom teacher during our freshman and sophomore years.

His tolerance and understanding of our ideas and ambitions started us on the road to success in high school.

We shall always remember him with grateful appreciation.

A MESSAGE TO the CLASS of 1954

The Class of 1954! How far distant June, 1954, seemed to you back in the fall of 1948 when you moved from the elementary department into the secondary department of the Red Hook Central School. Most of you will agree that your years in junior-senior high school passed you by quickly. Some of you may wish that you could relive certain years or experiences in high school. How often we hear, "If only I could do that ever again I would--." But this you cannot do.

This point brings home to us one of life's great teachings. We should, through careful thought and good judgment, live each moment of each day in every year so that we may have a minimum of preventable regrets. Human beings move down life's path in but one direction; there is no turning back. You go on from this point.

You have learned another fact about life during your high school years, namely, that time, as measured in months and years, goes by quickly. A man's working lifetime is far too short to achieve the many fine things that he wants to accomplish. We wish to make the point that your life will be too short to waste any of it through procrastination and marking time waiting for your ship to come in. The time is always NOW.

The faculty of the Red Hook Central School bids you bon voyage. We have done our best; now the future belongs to you.
