*20a. HISTORICAL INFORMATION AND TRADITIONS:

"Sometime before 1774 Hendrick Martin told his son Bartolob (Gottlieb) that it was time he took a wife and 'proceeded for himself'. His father cut a big stick and studding across the farm's bedroom it firmly in the ground. Upon that spot was built a solid substantial plain house with thick stone walls. As the reading of the Declaration of Independence was progressing the carpenters were busily putting on the rafters of the new house. Entrance is by old style door in Chelms - the original handle still does its work as well as when it was fashioned by the blacksmith at a shop nearby.
