

Hardeman Orchards

RHWG: This 172-acre farm, which today produces fruit, flowers, vegetables and field corn, has been preserved for agriculture and will remain forever open. This is one of two local farms that stand as gateways to the village that have been protected by conservation easements through a special program with the historic and environmental preservation organization Scenic Hudson. In the early 20th century, the farm was owned by Joseph Griffing, manager of the W.H. Baker Chocolate Factory and creator of the Lyceum Theater. Gordon Voorhees later established orchards and raised thoroughbred Morgan horses. John Hardeman and his family own and operate the farm and farmstand.
