A county grand jury indicted Singleton this month. A neighbor who saw a flickering light in Singleton's basement and feared it might be a fire called firefighters, who said they went into the house and found the marijuana plants.

Singleton and his lawyer won't say whether he still smokes marijuana.

"It's pretty sad that someone like Carter is arrested," said Cher Neuler of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, which advocates legalizing marijuana use. "People can get morphine. ... If that's legal, marijuana should be, too."

feet and 10 inches into the garage and into a 1929 restored truck that was parked inside, responding sheriff's Deputy Matt Spencer testified.

"He just kept gassing it and gassing it," the mother tearfully testified yesterday. The garage wall was pushed off the building's foundation blocks and the antique truck pushed a hole in the wall, said Spencer as pictures of the scene were shown on an overhead projector.

The jury trial is expected to continue this morning and will include testimony from other law enforcement personnel and Ball's family members who witnessed the incident. Fred Ball was not listed on the witness list late yesterday afternoon.

County funds

Three cities, township, parks

By KRISTA SCHULTZ

Morning Journal Writer

ELYRIA — Three cities, a township and the county's parks have formally appealed a plan that gives the city of Lorain a bigger share of local government funding at the expense of other communities in Lorain County.

Avon Lake, Elyria and North Ridgeville, along with Amherst Township and Lorain County Metro Parks, filed an appeal with the Lorain County Budget Commission and the Ohio Board of Tax Appeals to prevent enactment of the redistribution.

In the appeal filed last week, the
