

Eva L. Shephard.
 Snell. Sem.
 Sept. 1880.

Traveling.

Traveling is a pleasure which all cannot enjoy. for various reasons. the principle one in most cases being the want of means. There are various ways of traveling. the most important ones are on the steamboat or car.
 The conveniences of traveling are many now compared with what they were twenty or thirty years ago. For instance the cars upon which the first class passengers go East. there is nothing that could be more more convenient or comfortable.

In Traveling to any foreign place - such as the different parts of Europe. I think a person should study about the interesting if not the uninteresting parts of the country into which they are going -

If one knows nothing about the place they certainly can't enjoy looking at it as much as they would did they but but know ever so little.

Some think that it is best to study about a country after visiting it - but that can as I see, do but little good for most any one will forget about a great many of the things they have seen - The benefits are numerous that may be derived from traveling. In some cases, health is restored and again if any one has a great deal of sorrow - traveling may be the means of diverting their minds from it.

In traveling some if not great deal of experience is necessary - If one has not some experience he is pretty sure to meet with misfortune in some way - and in traveling in the cars one has to be quick too - That is if they don't want to be left at the station and the cars traveling away from them as fast as they can.

I - like every one else I suppose - hope that some time I may be able to spend a great deal of time in traveling.

A984.15a

Miss Eva Shephard,
Independence,
Inyo Co.
Cal.