Augustana Hospital School of Nursing

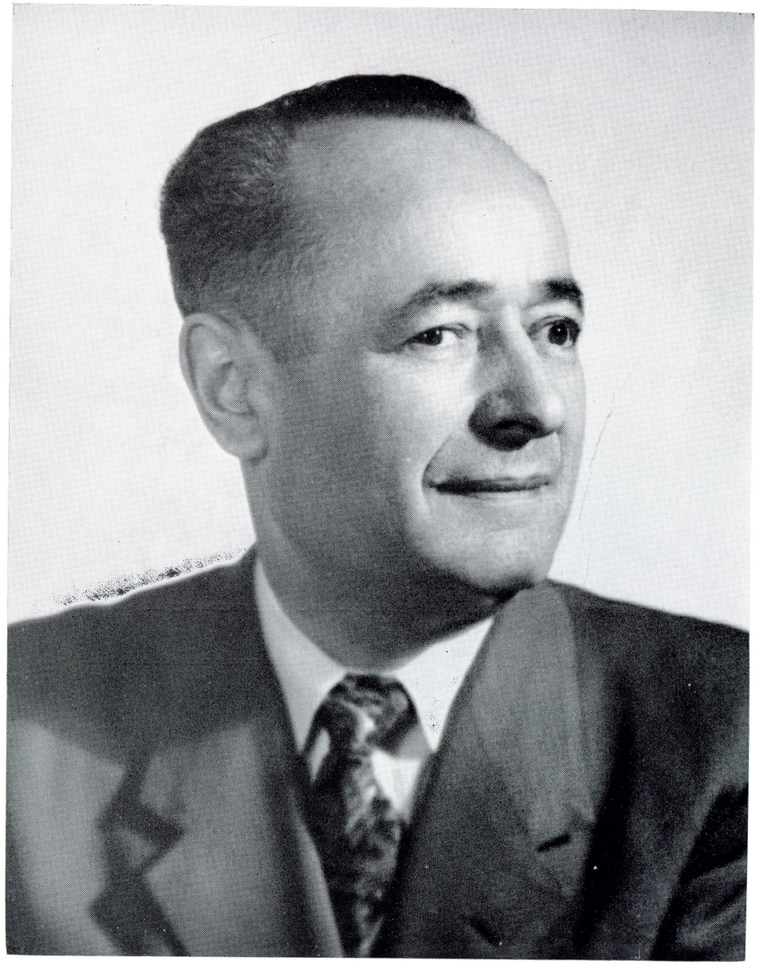

"They Serve God Well Who Serve His Children"

Dedication

To you Dr. Emanuel Merdinger — the student nurses of Augustana Hospital wish to dedicate this book.

As our chemistry and microbiology professor for the past three years you have been kind and helpful to each and everyone of us. With your many stories we have felt that we have shared a small part of your great life.

We will never forget you — our professor and dear friend. We will always be proud when you call us, "Your Nurses!"

Dr. Merdinger was born in Austria. He studied and received his Doctorates in Pharmacy, Chemistry, and the Natural Sciences from the University of Ferrani in Italy. At the German University of Prazana in Czechoslavolia, he earned his Masters Degree in Pharmacology. Presently he is the Associate Professor of Chemistry at Roosevelt University.

Administration

"They serve God well who serve His children."

In all hospitals, and especially in Augustana Hospital, service to God and service to His children comes naturally. The attitude of Christian service is the usual, rather than the unusual, here. This attitude shows itself in many other qualities common to the people of Augustana, such as friendliness, cheerfulness, and confidence in oneself and confidence in one another. This "Augie" spirit is, perhaps, the greatest part of what the student nurse gets here. You will have it with you for the rest of your life. No one can take it away from you. You will find it the most useful and long-lasting benefit gained from your student experience.
